King Edward Was Cool Dictators Are Kings Interesting Wanderers Harvey and Nellie Bly

By ARTHUR BRISBANE

(Copyright, 1936, by King Features Syndicate, Inc., International copyright and all other rights reserved.)

Britain is pleased, and well may be, with the conduct of the young King Edward, when a man, probably half or wholly insane, broke through the police lines, with a revolver, as the King rode in Hyde Park.

Numerous spectators, one American included, testify that the King cast one glance at the man, then rode on calmly, not hastening the pace of his horse, or again looking back.

The King's display of physical courage, coolly leaving the armed man to those whose business it was to look after him, does not surprise his subjects, who had seen his daring riding to hounds and in steeplechases, and had worried about his constant flying in weather of all kinds. But the British are much pleased with King Edward's display of coolness.

It will add enthusiasm and more intense British loyalty to the solemn crowning of the King next year.

When the Archbishop of Canterbury, in old Westminster Abbey, anoints the King's forehead with the sacred oil, placing on his head the crown of St. Edward, the new King will hold in his right hand the royal sceptre, in his left a globe surmounted by a crown, a globe of which the British Empire owns a large slice; and the great crowd in the Abbey and British millions outside will feel that they have a King with good nerves, able to share the hard task of holding that great empire together.

Congratulations on the King's escape, expressions of good will, and "faithful friendship" immediately reached the King from every corner of the globe. From France, felicitations were especially warm and numerous, from President Lebrun, from his cabinet, from the chamber and the senate, with all members standing and warmly applauding.

This French government, mixture of Socialism and Communism, thinks little of kings, but across the Rhine sits Hitler, and that means much.

The French President expressed his joy at the King's escape, through the French ambassador in London; the Senate congratulated the House of Lords, through the Lord Chancellor of England; the Chamber of Deputies felicitated the British House of Commons, and all the messages were lengthy and warm.

Germany's leader, Chancellor Hitler, sent his message to King Edward direct, and briefly, as from one king to another, no mention of Germany, or the German people in it:

"I learn at this instant of the horrible attempt aimed at Your Majesty. I express to Your Majesty all my cordial felicitations on having escaped from that danger."

This quotation, translated from German into French and from French to English, probably lacks the chancellor's vigor of expression.

Mussolini, leader and ruler of Italy, was even more businesslike, somewhat on the American plan. He called his London representative in the Italian embassy by telephone and ordered him to:

"Proceed at once to Buckingham Palace and offer to the King all my cordial felicitations on his escape from this danger."

Kings have big names and fine crowns, but dictators have big powers, and with no one above them in authority, this side of the sky, they naturally feel themselves at least equal to any king, forced to obey his parliament, and make speeches that his ministers write for him.

However, kings, if they behave wisely, as English kings do, have one advantage, their jobs are safer.

If queer events please, your Paris newspaper never disappoints you. For instance, three wanderers, a man, probably a Turk; a woman, a sixteen-year-old girl and her seven-months old baby are arrested for having no passport, or identification papers.

It turns out that the three have seventeen identifications, among them one asserts that he was born in Constantinople, Hlidah, Turin and various other places, and each, the baby excepted, has various names and several ages. The puzzled French judge said, on general principles:

"Two months in prison," and deux ans d'interdiction de sejour, which means, roughly, "After that, do not come back here for two years."

That is a custom in France.

A French lady writer thinks she has discovered in the Arabian desert a mysterious deep cave, in which "Lawrence of Arabia," not dead, as alleged, is

Mary Astor Hears Of Mate's Brawl

Scores in First Suit Tilt

MARY ASTOR

She Fights for Child

Los Angeles, July 29 (AP)—Broken wide open by questions about immorality and the story of a bathroom brawl, the battle of red-haired Mary Astor, screen beauty, to regain custody of her baby girl, raged furiously today.

She is attempting to break the court order giving her divorced husband, Dr. Franklyn Thorpe, guardianship of four-year-old Mary Thorpe.

To prevent certain portions of the evidence from going into the record, opposing lawyers met in an eleventh-hour conference last night. It failed.

"I hoped to protect Mary," Dr. Thorpe said before the night session opened. "I'm sorry for what's going to come out."

The result was that the first hour's testimony left a packed audience, studded with motion picture people, goggle-eyed and gasping.

Dr. Thorpe was the first witness.

Within five minutes he retorted sharply—to a question of why he had allowed Marylyn to remain with Miss Astor after the divorce—"because I thought and hoped she would be a good influence on her

SHERMAN'S PARENTS BEG GOVERNOR TO SAVE SON

WIFE-SLAYER DUE TO DIE NEXT WEEK

Passionately, but dry-eyed, the mother of Newell P. Sherman, condemned "American Tragedy" slayer, pleaded with Governor Curley today to say the word that would save her son's life.

Besides her in the governor's private office, adding tearful pleas to those of his wife, was Louis Sherman, grief-bowed father of the onetime Sutton choir singer and Boy Scout leader.

And outside, Governor's Councilor Winfield A. Schuster of Douglas was waiting with a petition signed by 800 persons asking what Mrs. Sherman begged, that the sentence of death in the electric chair be commuted.

SHOWS NO FEAR

Sherman himself, while these two last-minute moves were being made to save him, sat stolidly in a cell in state prison, exhibiting no dread of next week when he is slated to die.

Norman Perry of Sutton, a son-in-law, accompanied Mr. and Mrs. Sherman into the governor's cham-

LYNN BAKERY COLLECTOR HELD UP

Holdup men took $400 from a bakery truck driver at gunpoint and in broad daylight in Roslindale square today.

The victim was John F. Van Vleck, 28, of Burrill avenue, Lynn, driver for the Cushman Bakery of Lynn.

Van Vleck makes collections from other drivers over a wide area and delivers special orders to them. He was waiting to contact another driver when robbed.

THREE IN GANG

The driver noticed three men idling beside an automobile, parked across the street, and had just decided they were watching him, when two of the men walked swiftly across the street.

The leader pulled out a revolver and both climbed to the driver's seat.

"Throw up your hands and keep quiet," the gunman said.

FLEE IN AUTO

The other bandit reached for a box containing the $400 and both hurried back to the automobile, leaping aboard it as the third member of the robber gang shot the car away in second speed.

Van Vleck got the registration number and police said the car had been stolen yesterday in Chelsea.

TWO ASSOCIATED PRESS despatches from two widely separated sources—Gibraltar and Genoa—give the SUBSTANCE OF REALITY to the worst fears of a potential Red terror in Spain.

These FACTS also indicate the calamities that will be visited on the people of France if the Communists and radical Socialists succeed in their plans to make of that country a western branch of the Soviets.

From Gibraltar the Associated Press quoted British refugees from Malaga, Spain, as seeing "CHILDREN WEARING RED TIES AND RED SHIRTS SHOOTING DOWN SCORES OF FASCISTS AND PRIESTS. THE CHILDREN WERE BETWEEN FOURTEEN AND SEVENTEEN YEARS OLD. THEY CARRIED PISTOLS, RIFLES, AXES AND PUNCHEONS."

FROM Genoa, refugees from Barcelona, Spain, reported that "THIRTY CARMELITE MONKS AND A NUMBER OF SISTERS WERE

Madrid, July 29 (INS)—Spain's Leftist dictatorship, its hue turning red-der in the blood of civil war, today mobilized industry, agriculture, and finance, crushed religious education, and called up thousands of new warriors for a vast multiple onslaught against Rightist rebels.

Four thousand reinforcements aped over the Madrid plain to block rebel advances below the Guadarrama Mountains, and reservists of the 1934 and 1935 classes in Madrid, Toledo and Ciudad provinces were summoned for war duty.

Other columns fought towards Cordova and Seville, Oviedo, Saragossa, and the rebel rear below San Sebastian. Government planes sped ahead again bombarded Saragossa, Cordova and cities in Spanish Morocco.

Rebel successes were reported on the road between Gibraltar and Malaga, with hundreds of insurgent troops daily being ferried over from Morocco.

SEIZE AMERICAN PLANTS

Without even waiting for yesterday's decree of the ministry of commerce authorizing a committee of four to take control of any industry "deemed necessary," Reds in Barcelona were unofficially reported to have seized the General Motors and Ford plants.

Nearly 400 automobiles of the General Motors branch there have been confiscated.

Heat killed a 64-year-old Lynn man today as the temperature climbed steadily towards the nineties, promising to exceed yesterday's reading of 91.

Only thunderstorms, promised by the weather man for late this afternoon, gave any hope of definite relief.

The heat victim was William Tattersall, of Tremont street, Lynn. A familiar figure in Summer street of that city, Tattersall had sold newspapers for years.

He collapsed on his beat and was taken to Lynn Hospital, where he died in a short time.

The humidity was above normal today, with a reading of 78 per cent.

The all-time record for heat on this date was made in 1921 when 97 degrees was recorded. It was equalled in 1933.

Because of the intense heat, Acting Postmaster Peter F. Tague canceled the 1:15 p. m. delivery of mail in the Boston postal district. About 450 carriers benefited.

Unnamed charges against the fighters were brought up at a session of the boxing committee, headed by Roy E. Davis of Chicago, last night, and they were dismissed from the squad forthwith.

GOV. LANDON WINS ACTIVE SUPPORT OF PINCHOT

PROGRESSIVE SWING SEEN BY NEW ENDORSEMENT

By WILLIAM K. HUTCHINSON
International News Service Staff Correspondent

Topeka, Kas., July 29—Governor Alfred M. Landon today was openly challenging President Roosevelt for the active support of Progressives throughout the country.

The Governor entered this contest for liberal votes with the endorsement of Gifford Pinchot, Progressive leader and follower of the late Theodore Roosevelt.

LANDON DOES THINGS

An overnight visitor with Mrs. Pinchot at the Landon mansion, the former Governor of Pennsylvania declared:

"I am for Governor Landon for President for two reasons: 1—Alfred Landon; 2—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"Governor Landon is a practical Progressive, with the habit of doing things. Franklin Roosevelt however good he is in other matters, is a good starter but a poor finisher.

"In our conversation, we discussed in particular the T. R. Roosevelt conservation policy and I found Governor Landon and I are in entire accord."

NEW DEAL BREAK

Pinchot endorsed and campaigned for President Roosevelt in 1932. He broke with the President a year ago in disagreement over New Deal policies, particularly "scandalous conditions in the Work Progress Administration." Now he will campaign actively for Landon's election.

The Governor discussed with Pinchot his plan to open his active Presidential campaign with a speech at his birthplace in Westmiddleton, Pa. Pinchot declared it would "make Landon many votes."

"He will carry Pennsylvania," Pinchot added.

Hoover Expected to Stump in Maine

New York, July 29 (AP)—Republican leaders and close friends of Herbert Hoover expressed the belief today the former President would make at least two major addresses in the east in behalf of the Landon-Knox ticket, one in Maine and the other probably in Pennsylvania.

In all, these expect Mr. Hoover to deliver four or five speeches over the country in the closing weeks of the campaign.

The former President, these sources said, plans on coming to New York for the directors' meeting of the New York Life Insurance Company September 9.

The Republicans will be winding up their campaign for the Maine state election of September 14. Already requests have been made for Mr. Hoover's speaking services there.

The former President, according to his friends and political associates here, may go directly from the New York meeting for the Maine address, which would be made at the principal state-wide rally closing the state campaign.

Hamilton Replies To Farley's Jibes

Indianapolis, July 29 (US) — Chairman John D. M. Hamilton, in an address here, answered Democratic Chairman Farley's remarks pertaining to Governor Landon's nomination acceptance speech, Hamilton spoke before the Republican Editorial Association of Indiana and said:

"I note that Mr. Farley, about to be Postmaster-General of the United States on leave, has criticized Governor Landon's speech of acceptance on the grounds that he, Mr. Farley, has been unable to draw any definite conclusions from it and that it was unspecific. Senator Robinson, leader of the Senate, likewise was unimpressed. I should like, here and now, to ask those gentlemen three questions:

"First, whether a candidate for the office of President of the United States is saying nothing pertinent as to his qualifications for office or of interest to the voters of the United States, when he says, as Governor Landon did: 'No man, in common good faith to his fellow citizens, may rightfully assume the duties of the high office of Chief Executive and take the oath that goes with that office, unless he shall intend to keep and shall keep his oath inviolate.'

JUDGE CANDIDATE

"Second, whether such a candidate is either unspecific or difficult to understand when he states, as Governor Landon stated: 'We will not take our economies out or allotments to the unemployed. We will take them out of the hides of the political exploiters.'

"And third, I should like to ask Mr. Farley and Senator Robinson whether they were listening to the ceremonies at Topeka and heard the vast spontaneous roar of 'No' that greeted Governor Landon's question, 'Shall we continue to delegate more and more power to the Chief Executive?' and the vast spontaneous roar of 'Yes' that followed the succeeding question, 'Or do we desire to preserve the American form of government?'

"It is significant to all that thousands upon thousands of farmers, of their own volition and at their own expense, travelled to Topeka. They came, not to see any exhibition of war works furnished at government expense or to observe any elaborate parade of mummers or see any beauty contest, as did the visitors to Philadelphia.

CAME TO HEAR TRUTH

"They came for the single purpose of hearing a sober discussion of the problems besetting us today. They came to hear a man who has always been known for his honest and straightforward character, expound the ideals and convictions on which he accepted the nomination of the Republican party for President of the United States.

BALANCED BUDGET

"They heard such a statement from this man and they departed deeply satisfied. But the speech-worn delegates at the Philadelphia convention, that is those of them who did not take a walk before the end of it, flocked to their trains on the final night having evolved the eminently practical slogan: 'Vote for Roosevelt but put your money on Landon.'"

Broadway Boy Actor Missing

New York, July 29 (INS)—Police today were asked to hunt for Charles Duncan, 16-year-old boy actor, who disappeared from his home June 23. The disappearance of the youth, who played the role of "Spit," in the Broadway success "Dead End," was reported by his mother, Mrs. Stella Duncan, with whom he shared a studio apartment.

Straw Vote Trend

Further Setback for New Dealers

MASSACHUSETTS

Bettering a 2 to 1 ratio over their Democratic opponents, Henry Cabot Lodge, Jr., Republican candidate for United States senator, and John W. Haigis, Republican candidate for governor, increased their leads during the 15th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw vote.

Lodge and Haigis led their rivals, Governor Curley, Democratic aspirant to a senate seat, and State Treasurer Charles F. Hurley, the Democratic gubernatorial candidate, in Newburyport, Merrimac, Amesbury and Danvers on the 14th day.

The standing, with mail votes included, now is as follows:

For United States Senator:

Lodge	4094
Curley	2031

For Governor:

Haigis	4263
Hurley	2055

Newburyport gave Lodge 54 votes, Curley 21. Haigis 51 and Hurley 21; Merrimac came through with 27 for Lodge, 13 for Curley, 26 for Haigis and 17 for Hurley; Amesbury returned 78 for Lodge, 35 for Curley, 72 for Haigis and 38 for Hurley, while Danvers results were 44 for Lodge, 17 for Curley, 42 for Haigis and 19 for Hurley.

Today the straw ballot car is in Haverhill, Lawrence and Methuen.

MAINE

With even the home town of Governor Louis J. Brann treating him thinly, Republican candidates in Maine for the United States Senate and for the governorship continued to pile up leads in the 15th day of the Boston Evening American-Sunday Advertiser straw ballot.

Governor Brann, Democratic candidate for the Senate, barely carried his own home town of Lewiston, polling but 58 votes to 52 for Senator Wallace H. White, Jr., his Republican opponent.

In the gubernatorial fight, Lewiston gave Lewis O. Barrows, the Republican, the edge with 97 votes as against 73 for Dubord.

In Auburn, the twin city across the river, White polled 66 votes, Brann 39, Barrows 69 and Dubord 36.

Ending the 15th day, the straw ballot standing in Maine is:

For United States Senator:

White	2079
Brann	2038

For Governor:

Barrows	3178
Dubord	1065

Today the straw ballot car is in Augusta, the Maine state capital. Watch for it—and vote!

ANTI-DEALERS PLAN DRIVE

Washington, July 29 (INS)—The campaign of Anti-Roosevelt Democrats, while pitched on a national scale, will be concentrated in 15 northern and five southern states, it was reported in political circles today.

Leaders in the party revolt against President Roosevelt are said to be planning to base their campaign upon a political survey begun before Sterling E. Edmunds, St. Louis attorney, issued a call for a conference of Anti-Roosevelt Democrats in Detroit, Aug. 7.

The drive is expected to embrace a wide territory from New England through the Middle West, and to include Virginia, North Carolina, Florida, Louisiana and Texas.

CHICAGO EAGER TO HEAR KNOX

Chicago, July 29 (US)—Practically every group in Chicago's great cosmopolitan population will be represented in the audience that will greet Colonel Frank Knox, Republican vice-presidential nominee, when he delivers his speech of acceptance at the Chicago Stadium tomorrow night. This part of the big program was completed today when prominent group leaders were named by Chauncey McCormick, chairman of the citizens' committee, who said:

"We are assured that this gathering will more nearly represent all Chicago than any political demonstration ever held in the city."

U. S. Senator Frederick Steiwer, of Oregon, who will deliver the formal notification address, headed the vanguard of G. O. P. notables who have arrived in Chicago.

Republican national headquarters announced that the full notification committee is en route, comprised of one representative from each of the forty-eight states, the District of Columbia and the territories of Hawaii, Porto Rico, and the Philippines.

After a conference with Harrison E. Spangler, Iowa committeeman in charge of the organization activities in the grass roots states, Senator Steiwer declared:

"Several states now claimed by the Democrats will show big gains in the G. O. P. congressional delegations.

"This is notably true in Iowa, where the unfortunate death of Senator Murphy left an opening for the election of two Republican senators.

"Two senators are also to be elected in New Mexico and we have high hopes of winning both seats.

"Sentiment for Landon and Knox is growing rapidly throughout the country and is increasing, naturally, as people learn more about the Kansas governor and his running mate."

SLAIN. ALL BARCELONA CHURCHES WERE SET ON FIRE AND SACKED."

These acts follow inexorably the historic methods of Communism.

The Paris Commune of sixty-five years ago ruled with the torch and the musket. It laid half of Paris in ruins.

The Lenin Coup in Russia in 1917 was followed by a Red reign of terror in which it was estimated that from three to five million persons were ultimately slain or sent to Siberia and concentration camps.

The short-lived Communist dictatorship of the infamous Bela Kun in Hungary was characterized by deeds that were a disgrace to ANY civilization.

THIS doctrine of violence and UNIVERSAL CIVIL WAR is openly advocated in the teachings of Lenin.

On Page 17 of Lenin's "A Letter to American Workers" (the International Publishers Co.) this sentence occurs:

"The American workers will not follow the Bourgeoisie. They will be with us for CIVIL WAR against the Bourgeoisie."

Under the Communist program a violent swing to the left in America will produce, AUTOMATICALLY and NECESSARILY, the horrors that exist today in Spain, the same horrors that now threaten France, and the violence and infamies of the Bela Kun regime in Hungary and the Lenin-Trotsky rule of Russia.

COMMUNISM is at our doors—it has, in fact, CROSSED THE THRESHOLD into our schools, our army, our navy, our industrial organizations, our labor unions.

To remain INERT and UNBELIEVING before this UNIVERSAL MENACE is to fail in a duty of NATIONAL DEFENSE.

Today's

Boon-Doggle

Indicative of the "foresight" with which Works Progress Administration officials prepared for the present drouth is the situation in Las Animas County, Colorado.

With over 3,000,000 acres devoted to agriculture, Las Animas County has more land in farms than any other county of the state. This is no Garden of Eden, however, since the county lies in the arid reaches of southern Colorado, which are frequently subjected to drouth, the records of which, according to the Weather Bureau, occurred in the early spring of this year.

In all the Works Progress Administration has announced presidential approval of $1,281,000 worth of work relief projects for this county and among these there is not one water conservation project that has been selected for operation. The only active item in the entire list that is even remotely connected with conservation is a flood control project at Trinidad, and on this the government will spend the munificent sum of $4151.

'Uncle, Give Us Bread!'

DISEASE REAL SOVIET PERIL

Danish Writer Tells Of Wide Suffering

Arne Strom is a Danish poultry expert who had lived in Canada and the United States. He was engaged by the Soviet Government to help improve its state farms.

Accompanied by his wife and child, Mr. Strom went to Soviet Russia imbued with a deep sympathy for the Communist experiment.

He spent a year off the beaten track, on a state collective farm and traveling widely throughout the country.

Everywhere he went in Russia he heard the cry from a starving and miserable people, "Uncle, Give Us Bread!" He returned to Denmark utterly disillusioned.

With the pitiable cry of the tortured millions, "Uncle, Give Us Bread," as the title, Mr. Strom has published the record of his experiences.

The book was translated from Danish and issued in England in the spring of 1936.

"Uncle, Give Us Bread!" is an unadorned and unique picture of life under the Soviet regime. It is suffused with a profound love for the helpless Russian people ground down by a merciless dictatorship.

ARTICLE THREE

By ARNE STROM

The hall of the railway station was crowded with ragged, filthy, patiently waiting peasants. They looked as if they had been waiting for days on end or as if they had decided to camp provisionally in the hall and on the platforms. They were dreadful to look at in their poverty and misery. What could be the meaning of it all?

While we were waiting for our train, we were assailed by several beggars. A couple of women carrying babies in their arms looked particularly starved and miserable.

When our red-haired guide returned with our tickets a ragged woman—lean as a rake—stood in front of us carrying a wee infant with an old, serious face. She pointed to her mouth to make us understand that she was hungry. Then pushing back the baby's sleeve she showed us its arm. It was literally nothing but bone over which the skin lay tightly stretched.

Our guide pushed her aside brutally and then told us in a torrent of words that she, and all the others who looked like her, were people who refused to work. His words sounded to us like a lesson learned by heart, a clumsy lie, for what mother, yellow, black, white or red, would refuse to work when there was a question of saving the life of her child.

We ought not to have been allowed to witness this scene. The big hall was crowded with the most wretched beings. The sight of them had been a terrible shock to us. Was it possible that all these people refused to work? We doubted it.

But why then had we been told this lie?

Board Train

We were installed in a four-seated compartment, which could be divided up by a sliding partition now pushed back. We were already rejoicing in the idea that we were to have it all to ourselves. Just as the train was starting, however, two men got in. We tried to protest, but they proved their right to two of the four berths.

They were Germans and both of them were very kind. When they drew forward the partition it became evident that we had still ample room and we were sorry we had complained. As soon as we had started one of the Germans knocked on the partition and asked permission to come in and talk to us for a little while. He had immediately realized that we were foreigners, but had not been able to fix our nationality.

He gave his name as Berger, an engineer, and we told him our name and where we came from, and that I was a farmer with special Canadian training as an expert in poultry. As the time went on he appeared to us to be mad — stark, staring mad.

It was the most uncanny kind of madness I had ever come across, for now and then he almost made me believe what he told me.

Berger had already been two years in the Soviet Union; he was now on his way to Stalingrad where he was to put up some machinery.

Moscow a Lie

When I asked him what he thought of Moscow, he answered straight away:

"The old Moscow is wonderful, but the new Moscow is a lie, a damned lie!"

I stared at him in wonder.

"You don't believe me, of course. You must find it out for yourself."

My wife and I exchanged a surprised look at such frankness from a total stranger.

How on earth did he dare be so open with us.

Berger went on quite unmoved.

The best thing I could do was to send my wife and my child back to a civilized country as soon as possible, as typhoid, cholera, venereal disease and starvation reigned everywhere except in the propaganda centers like Moscow, Leningrad and other big towns, where, in spite of all, it had been possible to hide the true state of affairs.

We were to remember never to touch unboiled water, never to drink out of glasses used by Russians, but always to carry our own glasses about with us. We must be very careful in our choice of friends as nearly everybody was infested with lice, and lice were terrible carriers of infection.

Towards beggars we had to be brutally firm, otherwise we would be overwhelmed by them. As soon as we had arrived at our destination we were to be vaccinated against typhoid and smallpox. It was true that the vaccine they used here was generally no good, but still it left one free from responsibility if one did fall ill. We must be sure to insist on having our own inviolable, and we must immediately put it under lock and key, and we must do our best to live in rooms that are as isolated as possible, preferably in a house to ourselves.

We must begin by finding out where was the nearest provision stores for the use of foreign experts so that our supplies could be sent to us regularly every month.

We must promise him to see to this first of all for otherwise we should be left to starve just like the poor Russians themselves. We were to remember to scold right and left or we would get nothing done.

He asked us repeatedly whether we had brought enough soap with us from Moscow, and when he heard we had only four cakes he gave us another four cakes as a present. He thought he would be able to get soap for himself in Stalingrad.

Suddenly his seeming madness broke out again. He told us of the GPU mass murders of the peasantry in Talovaya, near the farm where we were to live; of the Khirghiz Tribes in the districts of the Lower Volga who had all got venereal diseases; and then he suddenly stopped, called our boy, who had been sent to his compartment while he told us all this, petted him, gave him walnuts, and sweets, sat down on the floor of the compartment and had a playful boxing match with the child, whom he watched with wet eyes while he whispered to us that our boy was ein schoner bube (a nice boy) who reminded him of his own.

"Are you a Communist?" I asked.

"When I arrived in the Soviet Union I was inclined towards Marxism and I even thought of joining the party, but I soon saw enough of Russia to become thoroughly cured of that, for the Russian kind of Socialism is 'nur eine parodie des sozialismus.'" ("Only a caricature of Socialism!")

"For goodness' sake never join the party and never take Russian nationality, for then there is no hope for you."

Speedy Return

He himself had only one aim: A speedy return to Germany. Mr. Berger had both frightened and charmed me. I thought him mad—anyhow, I forced myself to believe it.

My wife and I lay a long time in our bunks that evening talking matters over. I tried to calm her. Mr. Berger was both nervous and overstrained, so there was no need to take his words too seriously, but if only a small part of what he said were correct we must obviously be prepared for strange adventures. My wife surprised me by suddenly declaring that she was certain every word Berger had said was true and that she had not thought him the least bit exaggerated.

"But we must hope," she added considerately, "that I am mistaken." We both of us spent a very restless night.

The fourth installment of Arne Strom's amazing book will appear in tomorrow's Boston Evening American.

HEY-HEY WHILE SUN SHINES!

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

It was 94 in the sun—with plenty of sun—but these frolicking folk at Nantasket Beach didn't care for overheated thermometers. For the ocean was all wet and cool and inviting. This is only a small part of the huge crowd that splashed in the surf on one of the hottest days of summer, when the mercury shot up to 92. However, the humidity was less than normal, and that helped a lot. Boston was the hottest weather station in all New England, but no records were broken.

CURLEY In Hospital EXPOSE

PLANS RADIO TALK TONIGHT

Responsibility for alleged existing conditions at Massachusetts mental institutions is to be fixed by Governor Curley in a radio address tonight, he indicated today.

The governor planned a lengthy discussion on the conditions which he found in a personal investigation at Boston State Hospital, Mattapan, last week as well as matters which have been reported to him concerning other mental institutions in the state.

He has not yet made known whether he will call a special session of the Legislature to seek additional funds for the budget of the State Department of Mental Diseases.

During a conference with Commissioner Winfred Overholser of the department Monday, the Governor ordered him to go ahead and clean up the existing conditions and not to consider the expense. Dr. Overholser declared this would mean expenditures beyond the budget allowed him.

15 FEARED DROWNED AS LAKE SHIP SINKS

Chicago, July 29 (AP)—Fifteen men were feared drowned today when the motor ship "Material Service" capsized in the rough waters of Lake Michigan four miles off Chicago's South Side.

Seven members of the crew were rescued, but Captain C. D. Brown and 14 others were listed as missing by the Coast Guard.

First Mate John M. Johnson, one of the seven who were saved after they had clung for more than a half hour to pieces of wreckage, gave the first account of the tragedy.

He said the vessel, loaded with sand, listed suddenly to port as it nosed through a heavy sea early today. It lurched crazily, Johnson related, and then sank swiftly.

A. E. Pierce, keeper of the Calumet Harbor Lighthouse Station, two miles off 86th street, saw the vessel go down. He notified the coast guard and put out in a small boat with his assistant.

They picked up two of the survivors. A South Chicago Coast Guard cutter rescued three others. A towing boat lifted the remaining two from the lake.

MAN MURDERED IN SOMERVILLE, HOLD SUSPECT

In a doorway near the Somerville-Medford line, Alfred L. Cullington, 58, of Wallace street, Somerville, was bludgeoned to death early today by three men.

Seven hours later, William J. O'Donnell, 25, of Upland park, Somerville, was arrested at his home by Sergeant Joseph F. Small and two Somerville patrolmen.

In Somerville court, O'Donnell pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter and was held in $3000 for the grand jury.

Police said they expected to make two more arrests today as a result of the brutal beating administered to Cullington in the doorway of a Main street building, near Fremont street.

Cullington, a frame maker and well known in the Powder House Hill section, was apparently waiting for a trolley car when he was attacked by his slayers and dragged to the doorway where his dead body was found.

Mystery surrounded the killing. There had been no apparent attempt at robbery, police said.

They also pointed out that Cullington had not been drinking and that he enjoyed an excellent reputation in the community, obviating the possibility he had been slain by enemies.

One story of the fatal beating was told by Thomas Corcoran, of Ash street, who witnessed a part of the brutal slaying before being driven away from the scene by two unknown men.

According to police, he described Cullington's three assailants as youths ranging from 18 to 20 years in age.

Two officers were rushed to the scene after a woman had telephoned police and, after refusing to identify herself, cried:

"A man is being murdered on Main street, near Fremont street."

She hung up the receiver before police could question her further. When the officers arrived they found Corcoran and he told the following story:

He was driving from Medford to Somerville when he saw a man dragging another toward a doorway, punching him and kicking him at the same time. He halted his machine to see what was going on.

TOLD TO "BEAT IT"

At the same time two youths, leaning against a fence on the opposite side of the street, started toward him. One approached the Corcoran machine, peered inside and said:

"All right, you, beat it. Mind your own business.

"We're taking care of this fellow."

Corcoran said he drove away in search of a police officer but failed to locate one. He encountered a friend, he said, and returned to the scene.

As he reached the point where he had witnessed the attack, he saw three young men running down the street in the direction of Medford. At this point the Somerville officers arrived at the scene.

At the Cullington home, it was learned from neighbors that his wife, Mrs. Emily Cullington, left home a few days ago for a vacation. They did not know her whereabouts.

Film Girl Found Stabbed to Death

Butcher Knife Used in Killing

DOROTHY JAY CORCORAN
Movie Extra, Killed in Own Bedroom

Hollywood, July 29 (AP)—Frank J. Heflin, 39, former city health inspector, was held on suspicion of murder today as detectives checked the circumstances leading to the fatal stabbing of a pretty film extra, Mrs. Dorothy Jay Corcoran.

Her jugular vein slashed, apparently with a butcher knife, the 29-year-old woman's body was found on a bed in her mother's home late yesterday.

Police found a half-empty bottle of wine nearby and a man's blood-stained shirt behind the davenport.

Heflin, arrested at his apartment, said:

"I didn't kill her."

He asked to consult a lawyer before making further statements.

A neighbor, Mrs. Amelia Imsland, summoned police to the Corcoran home after hearing screams and seeing a man leaving out of the window there, she said.

The dead woman's mother, Mrs. Olga Jay Alder, a milliner, was away at the time. Her daughter separated from her husband, William Corcoran, two years ago and in recent months had been involved in a romance with Heflin, Mrs. Alder told police.

"Heflin once threatened to kill me with a butcher knife because he thought I was trying to persuade my daughter to leave him," the mother said.

A 10-inch butcher knife, believed by detectives to be the death weapon, was found in the kitchen sink.

Quake in Montana

Helena, Mont., July 29 (INS)—A severe earthquake shock rocked the area between Butte, Helena and Great Falls, Mont., at 7:30 a. m. (EDT) today. No serious damage was reported.

Woman Links Man In Store Holdup

On a woman's identification, a Revere man was charged today with assault and battery on Frank A. Hook, Winthrop store manager, who three times has beaten off gunmen with his fists.

The arrested man is William F. Lee, 28, of Crescent avenue, Revere. He denied trying to hold up Hook and police said he had never been in court before, but he was charged with assault and battery with a revolver with intent to rob and held in $5000 bail in East Boston court.

According to Winthrop police a woman, who saw the bandit leaving the store, identified Lee as the man, picking him out of a police lineup.

Hook, who suffered a concussion of the brain while defending his day's receipts and driving the bandit into flight, has not viewed the suspect as yet. Hook is in bed at his home on Chestnut street, Lynn.

Judge Charles J. Brown set August 6 as the date for a hearing in the case.

CHAINED BOYS SAVED

Fire Perils Lads Father Shackled

Brighton, Colo., July 29 (AP)—Two small brothers, saved from a fire last night in the basement of their home where they had been chained, remorsefully saw their father in jail today—accused of chaining them to keep them at home.

W. B. Wheeler, state humane officer, said the boys, Wayne and Jimmy Hamblin, 10 and 12 years old, escaped injury when a gasoline-soaked rug flamed in the room where their father, Roy Hamblin, 42, a Works Progress Administration worker, had fastened them.

Wheeler said the brothers were held to a board by chains padlocked about their necks.

An older sister, Lois, 14, heard their cries and ran to their aid. She beat out the flames with a broom and their mother, Mrs. Goldie Hamblin, freed them. The blaze did little damage.

"Chaining them up seemed the only way to keep them home and to keep their mother from worrying every time they went to the swimming hole," Hamblin said.

"I didn't do it to be cruel. The thought they might be trapped in a fire never occurred to me."

MARY ASTOR'S MATE IN ROW, COURT TOLD

mother." His steel-blue eyes were flashing.

Miss Astor's attorney was cross-examining the doctor. He drew the admission that the movie star paid the bills for her upbringing, although Dr. Thorpe had legal custody of the baby.

"I offered to pay everything," Dr. Thorpe said, "but she told me she wanted to feel she had something to do with the baby, inasmuch as I had been given the guardianship."

In her complaint Miss Astor charged she was coerced into giving Dr. Thorpe an uncontested divorce when he threatened to "scandalize" her publicly. His answer was that she was guilty of "gross immoral conduct."

Momentarily tripped by the quick retort, the attorney, Roland Rich Woolley, then began digging into the story of Dr. Thorpe's relations with other women, in the months after the divorce two years.

He asked about temporary nurses the father said he employed for the baby when her regular nurse was having her day out, and wanted to know "if, on frequent occasions, they didn't stay in the house overnight?"

BABY'S NURSES

"Never," said Dr. Thorpe. "They never did."

"Do you know a woman named Norma Taylor?"

"Yes."

"Didn't she sometimes take care of Marylyn? That is prepare her dinner and put her to bed?"

"She might have helped me when I did those things," the witness said. "She used to come out and have dinner with me. But she wasn't a nurse and she didn't take care of the baby."

"Sometimes Miss Taylor would stay overnight, wouldn't she?"

"She never did."

"Ah ah!" Cried Woolley. "It's true that she frequently occupied the same bedroom with you, whether she stayed all night or not, isn't it?"

The doctor leaned over the witness box, his slim surgeon's hands locked together, and his teeth set so that the jaw-muscles bulged in hard, high knots beneath his ears. His handsome face was the color of wet chalk.

DOCTOR'S DENIAL

Across the room sat Mary Astor, staring at her shoetops. Her friend, Ruth Chatterton, film star, and director Fritz Lang sat behind her; their eyes on Dr. Thorpe. After a long pause he said:

"Norma Taylor never occupied any room, or any bedroom, in my house."

Woolley then introduced in evidence letters from which Dr. Thorpe said had been taken in his backyard. They showed Norma Taylor, a full-blown blonde, and in an affectionate embrace with him.

"Now, didn't you have some trouble about those letters, on occasion," Woolley went on. "A little disturbance at the house?"

Dr. Thorpe replied that one night, late last year, he and the girl had "insulted." He was unable to recall the exact date. Asked to describe it, he said:

"Well, she had been to a cocktail party, and she called up while Marlyn and I were having dinner. I could tell she was intoxicated, so I told her not to come to the house. But she did, anyway. She forced her way in. So I called the police and they took her away."

"Oh, that wasn't all, was it, Dr. Thorpe? Didn't you have words with her, first—in Marylyn's presence?"

THEN POLICE CAME

"No, she came into the dining room, and I told the nurse to take Marylyn to her room. Then I took Miss Taylor by the wrists and escorted her to the hall, by the front door. She tried to grab a silver candlestick and smash a window. She was intoxicated."

"As a matter of fact, you'd had a few, hadn't you?" the lawyer probed.

"No. Then the police came," Dr. Thorpe said. "I didn't find the two of you in the hallway together, did they? We weren't you upstairs, in the bathroom, with Miss Taylor?"

Dr. Thorpe said he could not recall the exact details, then he looked up and replied:

"Yes, I do recall that she slipped away from me and ran upstairs. She tried to lock herself in, but I got through the door and grabbed her. We fell down in the tussle."

INTIMATE FRIEND

"And your baby saw all this, didn't she?"

"Absolutely not," the witness answered. "She was in her room."

"This Miss Taylor was your sweetheart, wasn't she?"

"No, a friend."

"But an intimate friend," Woolley pressed. "You saw her even after that occasion, didn't you?"

"Only once," the doctor said. "On a business matter."

He then was asked about Mrs. Lillian Lawton Miles, who Miss Astor has charged was his wife when she (Mary Astor) married him.

"She sometimes stayed all night with you, didn't she?"

"She never did. Never."

"Well, weren't there times when you and she had breakfast in bed?"

"We may have had breakfast together," the doctor answered, "but never in bed. It's your assumption that those things took place, but it's not the fact."

FARLEY ADMITS P. O. DEFICIT OF $10,000,000

Copyright, 1936, Universal Service

Washington, July 29 — Postmaster-General James A. Farley, in his annual report, will admit a deficit of approximately $10,000,000 for the fiscal year which ended June 30, it was learned today.

It will be the first deficit conceded by Farley since he became a member of the cabinet and will be based upon the identical financial system under which he has claimed surpluses for the previous two years and which was widely criticized.

Though postal officials declined to discuss the department's finances today, it was learned revenues for the past year jumped $42,840,000, bringing total revenues to $673,635,302.

PAYROLL JUMPS

Against the increase in revenue, however, the department payroll jumped $50,000,000 by introduction of the 40-hour work week and some $20,0000,000 more through expansions in personnel forced upon it by the increased business. Another boost in expenses, indicated at $4,-000,000, represents the cost of maintenance of new public buildings completed during the year.

Deduction of these three items, in addition to the $2,000,000 spent for distribution of the soldiers' bonus, would indicate a deficit of approximately $14,000,000. However, the estimated cost of handling franked and penalty mail, set a year ago at $20,000,000, is expected to be raised to $24,000,000. As this item is directly ductible for operating expenses, its increase is expected to permit postal finance experts to shave the actual operating loss to $10,000,000.

SYSTEM SCORED

The Farley system of distinguishing between surpluses and deficits, involving the deduction from expenses of such items as franked mail and ship and plane subsidies, has been widely assailed by administration critics, who charged Farley with employing a subterfuge to disguise an operating loss.

Until Farley took over the postal reins the department had admitted deficits over a long period of years, but accepted the ship and air mail subsidies as part of routine expenses.

HOFFMAN PLANS PARKER PROBE

Trenton, N. J., July 29 (INS)—Governor Harold G. Hoffman today revealed he has notified Governor Herbert H. Lehman of New York that he will conduct a public hearing at Trenton on the request of the New York executive for extradition of Ellis Parker, Sr., and his son, Ellis Parker, Jr., of Mount Holly, N. J.

The Parkers are wanted in Brooklyn on indictments charging them and others with kidnaping and assault upon Paul H. Wendel, former Trenton lawyer.

Charges against the Parkers grew out of the investigation into the kidnap-murder of Baby Charles A. Lindbergh.

Stone built the coffin 14 years ago. When his health improved he up-ended it in his room and slept on a cot.

Neighbors found the body in his barricaded house, Dr. C. E. Brady pronounced him a suicide.

Merrimack River Victim Identified

Pulaski disappeared Saturday. Identification was made by the drowned man's son, Charles, 17, who recognized a tattoo on the right arm.

Wedding for Fanny? No! Rules Mamma

'Mother Knows Best'

FANNY KNAPP
Judge Jangles Romance

Love can laugh at locksmiths and such, but when Mrs. Minnie Knapp of Cooperstown, N. Y., means business, she means business, and love isn't laughing at her.

Which explains why her 18-year old daughter, Fanny, went right home to Cooperstown from Quincy courthouse today in mother's custody.

And why Lawrence Hall, 22, a former Boston youth and now a member of the Civilian Conservation Corps, isn't a bridegroom, but must face Quincy court August 5 on a continuance of charges against him.

Hall and Miss Knapp were arrested in Merrymount Park yesterday, with $20 between them and an avowed purpose to get married. They figured they'd make the wedding bells ring after court this morning.

But when Mother Knapp appeared, Judge Kenneth Nash decided Fanny had better go home. An idle and disorderly conviction was tabled so long as she was in her mother's custody.

Wollaston Man Guilty in Tax "Fix"

Fred Twigg, 35, a Wollaston cafe owner, was found guilty in Suffolk court today on a charge of larceny of $300 from Antonio Palange, 45, of East Boston, a former employe of Twigg.

Police testified that Twigg took $300 from Palange to "fix up" a $345.03 tax bill on his Princeton street home.

Palange, police said, received a bill stamped "paid" in return and the word "paid" was perforated on the bill similar to those sent out by the tax collector's office.

The officers told Judge Michael J. Murray that the perforation had been accomplished by punching a common pin through the sheet.

Finally the tax collector sent Palange a tax bill and he called police.

Judge Murray placed Twigg on probation after he had promised to make restitution.

Judge Sentences Former Policeman

Charged with assault and battery on Mary F. McManus, agent of the Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Children, William Leonard, 24, of California street, Newton, former Watertown policeman, was given a suspended sentence of six months in the House of Correction today in Newton court.

Leonard, who resigned as a policeman about a year ago while under charges, was alleged to have struck the agent and to have ejected her from his home.

Paris Rightists Again Raided

Paris, July 29 (AP)—Special police resumed their raids on Rightist centers today.

They searched the offices of the newspaper "Franciste," organ of one of the dissolved leagues, and turned over to an investigating magistrate a document which listed reserve officers summoned to an "instruction meeting" September 8, 1933.

U. S. TO BUILD 2 BATTLESHIPS

Washington, July 29 (AP)—Admiral William H. Stanley, Acting Secretary of the Navy, said today he had "not the slightest" doubt that the United States would begin construction of two new battleships next year.

"Probably we shall want to let a contract some time this fall," he added.

Under the naval appropriation act for the fiscal year ending June 30, 1937, the United States cannot start new battleships until some other nation does.

In the House of Commons in London, however, Sir Samuel Hoare, first lord of the admiralty, said today that the keels of two new capital ships would be laid next January.

Captions on 'King Attack' Bring Fines

London, July 29 (AP)—Six persons representing newspapers and news reels were fined a total of $10,250 today for publishing captions on July 16 worded: "An Attempt on the King's Life" or "The King: Assassination Attempt."

That was the day that George Andrew McMahon, a spectator at King Edward's military parade on Constitution Hill, drew a revolver as the monarch passed by on his horse. He says he did not intend to harm the King, but threw the weapon into the street as a "protest" against police "persecution."

The defendants were charged with contempt of court for prejudicing the case against McMahon before he was committed to trial

bers, but he remained in the background as the mother and father voiced their pleas.

The Shermans were with Governor Curley nearly an hour. They didn't see photographers, because the governor had arranged for them to come in through a back door and go out the same way.

SIGNED BY CITIZENS

The petition to the governor and his council was signed by more than 90 per cent of Sutton's citizens as well as by residents of nearby communities.

There were names of all but three of Sutton's town officials, names of all of the former town officials.

There were names of 37 of Sherman's former co-workers at the Whitin Mill in Whitinsville, and five of these names were names of girl workers.

There was only one name conspicuously absent. The name of another fellow-worker at the mill. The name of Esther Magill—the "other woman" in the tragedy that brought death to Mrs. Alice Sherman in Lake Singletary's waters.

ALL ASKED TO SIGN

In a letter to Councilor Schuster, Attorney Henry J. Humes, Sherman's senior counsel, declared that all the residents of Sutton were asked to sign the clemency petition, except a few who were away on vacation.

He said that only 3 per cent of all those residents refused to sign, and declared that the same percentage held true for town officials.

J.P. Morgan's Yacht Gets Supplies

Glen Cove, Long Island, N. Y., July 29 (AP)—J. P. Morgan's yacht, Corsair, loaded with supplies and with a full crew on hand, gave indication today the financier would depart shortly on his projected cruise to Europe.

Quantities of fruits and vegetables, a truckload of fresh eggs and butter, and 400 tons of water were taken on the yacht yesterday, and the crew of 56 was called to duty.

The yacht recently was overhauled and made ready for a sea voyage. Friends of Morgan at the Yacht Club in Glen Cove were told he "expected to take a rest," and that the ship might be in commission for ten months.

Morgan may visit Mediterranean points as well as England, friends said. He went aboard the yacht Saturday for luncheon and a two-hour cruise on Long Island Sound.

RED DICTATORSHIP SEIZES U. S. PROPERTY IN SPAIN

trolled territory have been reduced to ashes, and the government's decree confiscating religious buildings devoted to education must be enforced by local mayors within five days.

This decree does not, however, call for closing of churches as yet.

A third decree appeals to agricultural tourists to concentrate on producing food for the government, rather than leave the fields to take up arms.

A special credit of 40,000,000 pesetas was also decreed "for the prompt restoration of order."

SEVILLE CUT OFF

Saragossa was threatened by two columns, one from Barcelona and the other from Valencia, and the assault on that rebel city was due today.

Government forces marching against Seville massed today outside Cordova, which they hoped to take in their stride. Seville's electricity and water supplies have already been cut off, according to Madrid statements.

A government force, including many miners, marched westward along the northern coast and has taken up a favorable position overlooking Oviedo. A major clash looms outside San Sebastian, where columns of government and rebel troops are converging on the city by different routes.

Mayor Madriga of Toledo, a Catholic Popular Action member of the National Parliament, was murdered by a mob when he resisted arrest.

Reds Complete Plans To Seize Church Property

Madrid, July 29 (AP)—Special civil boards were ordered formed in all Spanish provinces today to complete nationalization of religious property throughout the nation.

Leftist officials began to set in motion the governmental machinery to carry out the decree, passed yesterday, to confiscate all church teaching property within five days.

Mayors were ordered to effect the confiscation and to take possession of all "scientific and pedagogic material." Details of the confiscation were to be carried out before notary publics and municipal secretaries.

AIMED AT JESUITS

The entire program, approved by the cabinet, was under the supervision of Marcelino Domingo, minister of public instruction.

The government decree, under Article 26 of the Constitution, was designed to complete confiscation of Catholic schools, colleges and universities formerly owned by religious orders.

The constitutional article prohibited the orders from teaching or owning colleges and already many buildings have been taken over, particularly those directed by the Jesuits.

In a matter of principle, the article itself virtually dissolved the Jesuit order in Spain although many priests have remained, disguised in civilian clothes and teaching in institutes and colleges owned by foundations and trusts.

Religious teaching was also banned from the public schools although priests were allowed to teach religion in churches. They were, however, forbidden to mention politics from the pulpit.

THE OFFICIAL DECREE

Large sums of money were reported found in the possession of some priests while other amounts were declared discovered in convents.

The official decree said:

"Teaching is prohibited by religious congregations by Article 26 of the Constitution. Since such a categorial law is not yet enforced despite the by-law approved June 3, 1933, it is the government's inexcusable obligation at this moment to satisfy the legitimate desire of the people.

"That demands immediate enforcement of those laws confiscating buildings which are dedicated to teaching."

Stranded Americans Wait Chance for Safety Dash

Washington, July 29 (AP) — Stranded Americans, given new guarantees of protection by the rebel-threatened government of Spain, laid final plans today for their escape from inland Madrid to an American cruiser waiting at the Alicante seaport.

Some 148 Americans, the largest group still reported on Spanish soil, planned to board trains tomorrow for their flight from the capital city, focal point of revolutionary strategy, according to advices received by the State Department.

QUINCY MAN HELPS

While 31-year-old Eric C. Wendelin of Quincy, Mass., third secretary in charge of the American embassy at Madrid, made final arrangements for the evacuation of Americans he had worked three days to achieve, the Coast Guard cutter Cayuga, "floating embassy" of Ambassador Claude G. Bowers, sought a rendezvous early today with two battleships off Bilbao.

There, 56 Coast Guard cadets who started out on the cutter for a training cruise will be exchanged for a detail of Navy enlisted men from the battleships Arkansas and Wyoming to aid in further rescue of Americans from Spanish ports.

The cadets will return to Hampton Roads, Va., on the battleships, which are en route from Cherbourg, France, on a midshipman's training cruise.

The Navy's heavy cruiser waited today at Alicante for the arrival of those Americans fleeing from Madrid tomorrow. If the train from Madrid goes instead to Valencia, state department officials said, the Quincy is prepared to move there within a few hours.

At last reports, 148 native Americans had taken refuge in the Madrid embassy. About 150 other American nationals—mostly Filipinos and Puerto Ricans—were believed also to be in the capital.

After reporting Madrid quiet in an earlier message, Wendelin late yesterday messaged his state department superiors.

"The diplomatic corps at Madrid, acting jointly under the Chilean ambassador acting dean, has demanded and received formal guarantees of protection for life and property of members of the diplomatic and consular corps and foreign residents in Madrid.

"They have also received a guarantee that missions would be permitted to communicate with their governments by all available means."

Word that Americans at two danger points outside Madrid were still safe reassured state department officials.

NO AMERICANS HURT

Although continued burning of churches and "uncontrolled robbery and mob murder" were reported from Barcelona, the state department was advised no Americans had been listed as missing or injured there.

Calm at Vigo was reported by Consul William W. Corcoran, who reported no American casualties in any of thep rincipal Galician coastal cities and said American lives and property were safe there for the present.

Secretary of State Hull said he was greatly encouraged by the indication that satisfactory avenues of escape would be available for Americans.

Washington, July 29 (INS)—The Spanish government's abrupt swing toward Communism today aroused grave concern here over the fate of huge American investments.

As the hard-pressed Leftist regime seized control of private industries and confiscated the fabulously valuable properties of the Catholic church, fears mounted that the $70,000,000 of American investments in Spain may be consumed in the flames of civil war.

The Leftist government's bold step toward setting up a Red Soviet regime came as the American government continued desperate efforts to remove its citizens from the war zone.

In the event of seizure of American plants by the Spanish government it was believed almost certain the American government would make an immediate and vigorous protest.

FLORIDA GIRL SHOT BY REBELS

Washington, July 29 (AP)—An American woman wounded last week in the fighting in northern Spain was identified today as Mrs. Fernando Gallardo, daughter of Col. D. B. McKay, editor of the Tampa, Fla., Times.

Her identity was established by American embassy officials in Madrid, who notified the state department she had been brought to the embassy from Guadarrama, where she was wounded.

For several days, she was a patient at the Guadarrama sanatorium, while fighting between rebel and government forces continued.

So far, Mrs. Gallardo is the only American known to have been injured in the Spanish civil strife.

Widow Controls Green's Millions

Kaufman, Tex., July 29 (AP)—Control of the far-flung $80,000,000 estate of the late American railroad figure, Col. E. H. R. Green, today was in the hands—temporarily at least—of his widow, Mrs. Mabel H. Green.

County Judge Ben Brooks of Kaufman County yesterday approved an application for appointment of Mrs. Green as executrix of the estate, which includes properties in Florida, New York, Massachusetts and Texas.

Her temporary bond was set at $50,000. The application requested the appointment be made permanent, and unless a protest is filed by August 10, control of the estate will pass to her.

Two Bolts Hit, $120,000 Damage

Quebec, Que., July 29 (INS)—Two bolts of lightning, striking within five minutes, caused a $120,000 loss today to the Anglo-Canadian Pulp and Paper Company.

Fire broke out, causing a loss of $90,000, when the first bolt hit the mill. A company tug burned to the water's edge after it was struck at the Mont Morency docks.

Soviets Hold U. S. Millions

Washington, July 29 (INS)—The Spanish Government's step toward nationalization of private property, arousing fears in Washington of serious impairment to American investments there, today focused attention again on wholesale seizure of all foreign interests by the Soviet government following the Russian revolution.

American property estimated as worth $350,000,000 to $400,000,000 was seized by military forces in Russia.

After 18 years American claims are still outstanding in connection with these seizures.

Rebel Plane Bombs Sink Submarine Off Gibraltar

Gibraltar, July 29 (AP)—Two straits lighthouse keepers reported today they saw the Spanish government submarine C-3 bombed by a rebel seaplane and declared they were certain the undersea craft was "lost."

"We saw the submarine about six miles south of Europa Point lighthouse," the lighthouse keepers asserted.

"A Spanish flying boat was coming from Albeciras, flying to Ceuta, Spanish Morocco. It sighted the submarine, turned and flew over it at a height of about 2000 feet.

"Then it dropped bombs that we saw explode within 30 feet of the submarine, which immediately disappeared.

"The flying boat circled the vicinity where the submarine sank, coming within 30 yards of the sea, and finally flew on to Ceuta.

"We are certain from the way the submarine submerged that she was lost."

PROVINCETOWN BARGAIN SAIL

Tomorrow comes the second Steel Pier half-rate excursion of the week to Provincetown on the tip of Cape Cod—and in the first edition of tomorrow's Boston Evening American coupons for the trip will appear.

Each week these excursions aboard the commodious pleasure liner of the Cape Cod Steamship Company are becoming more popular, and recently it was found necessary to arrange for two a week in order to accommodate the throng of trippers wishing to go.

The coupons tomorrow make it possible for adults to enjoy the all-day sail and the two-hour stopover at Provincetown for the special half-fare rate of $1 each.

For children, the special half-fare rate is 50 cents each, but each child must be accompanied by a parent or adult.

Clip the coupons tomorrow in the Boston Evening American.

FRANCO FEARS SOVIET REDS

Tangier, July 29 (INS)—Fate of the Spanish rebellion depends upon the extent of aid given the Leftist government by Moscow and Paris, General Francisco Franco, Insurgent leader, declared at Tetuan today.

"Surely Great Britain, Germany and Italy must be in Sympathy with our aims," he said. "We are not short of money but our danger lies in the extent of help given the government by Moscow and by the Leftist regime in France.

"Upon this aid depends the length of time the Madrid government can hold out against us.

"This is not a national question—it is an international one."

PARTED 30 YEARS

Brother, Sister Finally United

For the first time since they were separated, as babies, more than 30 years ago, Joseph C. Hardiman of Medford and Mrs. Francis Donnelly, his sister, met today at her home in Bristol, Conn.

Accompanying Hardiman to Bristol was another sister, Mrs. Margaret Chamberlain of 76 Newbury street, Wollaston.

More than three decades ago, the 10 children in the Hardiman family had their home broken up and the children went into different homes, some of them into the homes of widely-scattered relatives.

The present Mrs. Donnelly was taken to New Britain, Conn., and was brought up as Mary Loughery, later marrying Francis Donnelly, clerk of the Bristol police court.

Years later the children, except Mary, of whom all trace had been lost, were reunited.

It was two years ago when Hardiman learned that his remaining sister was in Bristol. He planned to visit her, but an automobile accident laid him up until last February.

Then word came that Mrs. Donnelly, who had been looking forward to the reunion, was unconscious following the birth of a child. The meeting was postponed but today it finally took place.

WILLIAMS BOY TELLS HOW HE FLED SPAIN

(Editors Note: The following eyewitness account of the Spanish Rebellion was written for the Associated Press by W. W. Keen Butcher, Williams College student and son of Howard Butcher, Jr., president of the Philadelphia Stock Exchange. Young Butcher, with a party of 12 American students, just has escaped the center of Spanish civil war.)

By W. W. KEEN BUTCHER

Bordeaux, France, July 29—We just have come from La Granja, 70 kilometers from Madrid.

We were in an international school with German and Spanish groups in an old Bourbon palace.

A week ago Sunday, our palace first was guarded by 12 Socialist militiamen while riots in Segovia were put down by civil guards with machine guns.

On Monday morning we were told to remain quiet in case of bombardment.

One hundred and fifty Fascist soldiers had come to town.

SOCIALISTS SURRENDER

We were on the second floor with the Socialists, below us.

On Tuesday 30 more Fascist soldiers escaped from Madrid and arrived at La Granja. They were greeted with cries of "Viva La Republica."

The hundred and fifty Fascist then aimed their rifles at the 12 Socialists. No shooting occurred, but all windows and doors were barred.

In the afternoon we had five minutes' notice to evacuate, for the Fascists were about to bombard the palace and force the Socialists out. The Socialists surrendered, but we had to get out anyway.

Our bags were searched by the Fascists, who had seized control of the town. We then were allowed back in the palace.

La Granja now is a "border town," with the Fascists in control there and the government people holding the Sierra Guadarrama behind it.

MILITARY RULE

Wednesday, at 4 a .m. four government bombers flew overhead. One was forced down near Segovia.

Later the Fascists came back, with two cannon.

They mounted machine guns commanding all roads and main squares. One was for anti-aircraft use.

They attempted, unsuccessfully, to get possession of Navacerrada, a mountain pass to Madrid.

We fixed up a bombproof cellar in the palace.

The soldiers' attitude was no longer friendly but definitely military.

We moved to inside rooms.

BUILD UP MORALE

Friday government airplanes again flew overhead and the soldiers took pot shots at them.

On Saturday a big celebration was under way when it was falsely reported he pass had been taken. The rumor was manufactured to aid the rebel morale.

Sunday we went by train to Segovia with a military pass and saw another commander who gave us safe conduct.

From Segovia we went to Medina, then to Valladolid. At every stop we were forced to show our safe conduct papers at Fascist court troops. Our American citizenship was of real value.

We took trains to Pamplona and the border. We arrived last night at Bordeaux.

Jimmy Walkers To Raise Terriers

London, July 29 (INS)—James J. (Jimmy) Walker, former mayor of New York, and Mrs. Walker, gave their way home again—this time with the intention of raising Irish terriers.

After a tour of Ireland, they will sail for New York aboard the Normandie this evening, taking with them three pedigreed Irish terriers.

More Wine For Soviet Workers

Moscow, July 29 (AP)—Wine for the working people, the Soviet government decreed today.

The newest official edict ordered champagne production increased from 300,000 bottles this year to 12,000,000 in 1942.

Communist leaders declared the order was one of a series which point toward greater freedom and a more abundant life for the Russian proletariat.

Velvet Turban Wins Tag

HERE IS THE HAT which is the rising star on the hat horizon . . . tagged by the Fashion Congress for its advance notions, including skull-cap dimensions, a flaring bow over the left temple, and the use of true milliner detail! Modeled by Miss Betty Stone of Newton.

"Black velvet" and "turban" are by-words for the brand new. But this is just the beginning. For one of fall's most delightful fashion features is to be its millinery. It will be small. It will stress detail. There will never again be any need of seeing your own hat advancing and retreating on other heads as you navigate the town's sidewalks. The milliner is coming into her own. And individuality is to become more than a word again!

For shopping information on the black velvet turban, phone Annice Brink, Fashion Editor, LIBerty 4000, or write her at the Boston Evening American.

"THE BOY CASTAWAYS" BY JULES VERNE

CHAPTER TWENTY-ONE

The next day was Sunday, a day strictly observed in England and America. However, on Chairman Island they relaxed a little from the severity of those customs and the young colonists took an excursion on the banks of Family Lake. The weather was cold, and after a walk of two hours followed by races on Sport-Terrace, they were glad to return to the warm hall and a hot dinner.

After dinner Garnett played his accordion while the others sang. Jack had the only good voice, but these days he never took part in the relaxations of his companions. Although they begged him, he refused to sing one of those childish songs he had sung so often in the Chairman School.

This Sunday, which had started with a little talk from "Reverend Gordon," as Service called him, ended with all in prayer. By ten o'clock, everybody slept soundly under the guardianship of Phann.

In June the weather got cooler. The surroundings of French Den became covered with thick snow. There were some good snowball battles in which a few heads were damaged. One day Jack, who never joined the battles, was hurt. A snowball thrown too vigorously by Cross caught him badly although it was not intended for him, and a cry of pain escaped him.

They Fight

"I didn't mean it," said Cross, which is generally the answer of the clumsy ones.

"Doubtless," answered Briant, "but you shouldn't throw your snowballs so hard."

"Well, then, why was Jack there," replied Cross, "since he won't play?"

"What a lot of words," cried Doniphan, "and for a silly little scratch."

"All right, it's not serious," answered Briant, feeling that Doniphan only wanted an excuse to argue, "but I'll ask Cross not to repeat it."

"And what are you asking him?" demanded Doniphan in a sarcastic tone, "since he's telling you he didn't do it purposely."

"I don't know why you mix in this, Doniphan," replied Briant, "that's Cross's and my business."

"And it's my business, too, Briant, since you take it in that tone!" replied Doniphan.

At that moment Gordon arrived, just in time to prevent a fight. He found Doniphan wrong and the latter grudgingly submitted and went into French Den. But Gordon feared some incident would draw the rivals into a fight.

Snow fell for 48 hours. To amuse the youngsters, Service and Garnett made a big snowman, with a huge head, big nose, and large mouth, something like an enormous goblin. Dole and Coster were afraid of it when darkness seemed to give it gigantic proportions.

"Oh, you cowards," cried Iverson and Jenkins, but they were almost as scared as the younger ones.

About the end of June those amusements had to be given up. Snow was three or four feet deep and made walking almost impossible.

The young colonists remained inside for two weeks and the daily program was carefully observed. Everybody enjoyed the studies and debates. Although the recreation hours had to be spent in the hall, the general health did not suffer. They escaped with only a few colds or sore throats which were promptly cured with rest and hot tea.

Then they were confronted with another problem. Generally their water was taken from the river at low tide so as not to taste salty. But when the surface of the river froze, it was impossible to do so.

Gordon talked the matter over with Baxter, who proposed to lay a pipe a few feet under the bank, so it would not freeze, to bring the water from the river to the storeroom.

It was a difficult work but fortunately they had one of the lead pipes from the bathrooms on the yacht. At last a water supply was assured for the storeroom.

Hungry Beasts

Another difficulty during this period was to get enough food for the little colony, for the boys could no longer hunt or fish for the daily needs. Only jackals driven by hunger came close to Sport Terrace. Indeed, one day about 20 came in a band, and it was necessary to close the doors of the hall and storeroom. An invasion of these wild animals, rendered ferocious by hunger, would have been terrifying.

In these circumstances, Moko had to take a few provisions from the yacht supplies which they were hoarding in case of future need. Gordon unwillingly gave permission to use them, and he sadly looked at the mounting "stock used" list in his notebook while nothing was coming in.

However, since they had quite a stock of ducks and geese, which had been hermetically sealed in barrels after a first cooking, Moko was able to utilize them as well as some salmon which had been salted down. But there were 15 mouths to feed, and the appetites were large.

They were not altogether deprived of fresh meat. Wilcox became very clever at setting the "figure four," a trap for small game which often brought them a victim.

With the help of his comrades, Wilcox also set some traps on the river shore, using the Slought's fishing nets tied to poles. In the meshes of these long nets, enough birds from the south moors were caught to supply their needs. The ostrich gave them most trouble to feed . . . Meanwhile taming of the wild bird made no progress, whatever Service might say.

"What a racer he'll be!" he often said, although no one could imagine how the feathered "flier" would be mounted!

Meantime, the ostrich had to be fed with grasses and roots that Service had to dig for two But he would have done anything to procure good food for his favorite pet!

On the morning of July 9th Briant stepped outside and found the cold so intense that he returned to tell Gordon of the sudden fall in temperature.

"It shows," said Briant, "that the Slought was carried in a much more southernly direction than we had thought."

"Yes," said Gordon, "and yet our atlas doesn't show any island on this part of the Antarctic Ocean."

"I can't understand it, Gordon, and I can't see where we would turn if we ever could get away from Chairman Island."

"Leave our Island?" cried Gordon, "do you still think of it, Briant?"

"Always, Gordon! If we could build a boat which would stand the sea, I'd not hesitate a minute to undertake a voyage of discovery."

"Well," answered Gordon, "no need to hurry! Let's wait at least until we have organized our little colony . . ."

"But Gordon," pursued Briant, "you forget that we have our families over there . . ."

Winter's Grip

"No, no, not at all, Briant! . . . But, anyhow, we are not too unhappy here. Are we suffering for anything?"

"Many things, Gordon," answered Briant, who thought it wiser not to keep up the conversation. "We've nearly used up our wood."

"Oh, the forests are full of wood."

"Yes, Gordon! But we need wood, for most of ours is gone."

"Today, then!" said Gordon. "Let's see what the thermometer says."

In the storeroom it was five degrees above zero, centigrade.

ADVICE on LOVE and MARRIAGE by BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Modern Spinster Proves Serious Contender in Matrimonial Race

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Women, unlike hats, are not "dated." Where there's life, there's hope. The man who first said that had women in mind.

At 40, Niece Betty is every bit as lively as she was at 20. A few gray hairs, wrinkles, a suggestion of fallen arches. They're to be expected. Niece Betty doesn't worry too much about them. She does very well with the tiny tins and cans that grace every drugstore window.

And, what is more, Niece Betty is definitely in the matrimonial race, giving her younger sisters mighty spirited competition.

Marriage statistics this year are significant. They are proof, real and irrefutable, that women of 40 can marry and DO marry. And, surprising though it be, fully 50 per cent of them go to the altar with men young enough to be their sons.

The old maid of a generation ago has not survived. She went out with the square piano and mandolin. Today's spinster is an ageless girl, intelligent, charming as the average wife, and always interesting to watch when an eligible bachelor's around.

From a little town outside of Boston comes Betty's letter. Young women will understand and appreciate her problem, which she describes as follows:

DEAR MISS FAIRFAX:

About three years ago I met a young man with whom I fell deeply in love. He seemed to care for me and came to see me frequently. After a few months I learned he had a steady girl friend, a childhood sweetheart of his own nationality, whom he was planning to marry.

Difficult as it was I resolved to leave him. I would stay away from him for two or three months at a time, but eventually I would always go back. After seeing him, I would again resolve to forget him.

Finally the idea occurred to me that if I could become interested in another man I would be more successful in putting this first fellow out of my mind.

Soon I met a fellow of 32 and accepted all his invitations to theaters, dances and movies. He was in love with me from the first. Having a good job, money and excellent prospects for the future, he ought to make an ideal husband. Yet, I find myself unable to return his love.

In spite of the fact the first fellow drinks to excess, gambles, never saves a penny and habitually flirts with other women, I still love him.

How would you treat a case like mine, Miss Fairfax? This may be amusing to others, but there is certainly no fun in it as far as I am concerned.

BETTY.

MY DEAR BETTY:

The river and the noose are not the only ways of committing suicide. Marrying a ne'er-do-well is usually just as effective.

This man of 32 loves you, wants to give you a home, comfort and security. Marry him. That's the thing to do. Probably you'll never have as good a chance.

It's my belief that you are one of those fickle young women who don't know whom or what they want. Heaven help you if you, despite my advice, intend to marry this first fellow, also fickle.

BEATRICE FAIRFAX.

WE HASTEN TO tell you of this unusually low price on a four-pound jar of fresh fruit preserves because we know from past responses to items of this kind it's the sort of thing you're interested in. These four-pound jars have never sold for less than 79 cents.

They're now 69 cents for large attractive glass jars full of sunkissed fruits preserved at the height of their goodness. There is a choice of strawberry, peach, damson plum, pin-o-mint (pineapple and mint), pin-o-cot (pineapple and apricot), loganberry, blackberry, and orange-grapefruit marmalade.

SARDINES make a very popular snack and they are also frequently used in 'appetizers,' for sandwiches and salads. A special lot of smoked sardines packed in pure olive oil are selling four 3¾-ounce tins for 25c. They will go quickly so be sure to get them early.

HANDY LITTLE BAGS for a number of uses now come in the light weight alleloth so much in vogue for raincoats and umbrellas. These bags are rectangular in shape. 12x8 inches with a zipper top and sell for 79c each. As this is a food department we must mention the use for storing foods in the refrigerator. It holds moisture in or out to keep the food fresh. But it also can be used for carrying personal articles, camping, picnics, bathing, or nursery. You will want several.

WE ALL AGREE that modern ways of doing things are easy and economical of time and labor. Sewing up the bird was a part of every chicken or turkey dinner. Then someone, either a hurried mother or a lazy housewife, thought of using skewers for this purpose. Bless her! And now we have the fowl lacer, small aluminum pins about the size of a match, which are inserted through the edges of the opening, and the bird is laced around there with thread. When cooked it is simple to cut the thread and slip out the pins. Four for 10c.

HOUSEWIVES have responded so to the use of wax paper bags for garbage receptacles that manufacturers are now making these in five-gallon size for use in outside containers. Sanitary, economical and easy to use. Twelve of these bags sell for 25c. This is a very generous supply and would last for six weeks at least.

THE BUSY HOSTESS cannot have too many trays for serving refreshments or meals on the porch. Indeed, many are going in for these meals on a tray with the main course, salad, bread and butter, beverage and even dessert for each person placed on individual tray. This method particularly eases outdoor service. However, the one that we are talking about is the large wooden tray with six glass dishes for sandwich fillings or appetizers arranged at the ends. Equipped also with a wooden bread board and a space to set the toaster if toasted sandwiches are being served. This is selling now for $1.50 at a stock-taking sale, usually $2.75.

FOR INFORMATION on any of the above items write Martha Lee, 5 Winthrop Square, Boston, or call Liberty 4000.

Asking Bids Are Exact

The value of asking bids in locating specific cards or distributing which can be fitted in, much in the manner of a missing piece in a jigsaw puzzle, with the master-hand is growing daily with their increasing usage in bridge.

Today's hand is an example of how asking bids settle the ever-quently used in 'appetizers,' for sandwiches and salads. A special lot of smoked sardines packed in pure olive oil are selling four 3¾-ounce tins for 25c. They will go quickly so be sure to get them early.

The bidding:

South	West	North	East
1♣	Pass	2 N T	Pass
4♣	Pass	4 N T	Pass
5♠	Pass	6 ♢	Pass
7♠	Pass	Pass	Pass

South was delighted to hear his partner's first response because the bid of two no-trump carried with it all the confirmation he needed for a seven-card suit. He therefore started 'asking' with a bid of four clubs—his weakness.

The four no-trump response proving ambiguous (North might hold ascertain control of clubs and the Aces of hearts and diamonds) South made the repeated asking bid of five clubs which, after a previous no-trump response, demands specification of Aces.

Had North held the club King and two other Aces, he would have been forced to sign-off with five spades, and in that case South would have bid for only a small slam. Also, if North had held the Ace of clubs and the Ace of hearts, he would have shown them by bidding five hearts (when holding the specific Ace and a side Ace, bid the latter) and in that case, also, the contract would have stopped at six-odd.

Mothers, Debs Agree On Mode

Style Silhouettequette! Simplicity Is Keynote

Fall Fashions Judged At Lunch

(Picture from International News Photograph Service)

MISS BETSY BYRON MRS. WALTER H. BYRON MISS EVELYN HASSMAN

When Fashion Congress models turn judges, when their mothers are invited to act as judges with them, and when exciting fall clothes are modeled and discussed it makes a red-letter day for all concerned. Mrs. Walter H. Byron of Weston, chairman of yesterday's jury, and her lovely daughter, Betsy, are shown here, with Miss Evelyn Hassman, one of the attractive socialite models at the "Looking Into Fall" show on the roof of the Ritz-Carlton Hotel.

BOSTON STANDARDS RULE AT RITZ-CARLTON

There was a surprising harmony of opinion at the Fashion Congress as mothers and their daughters took part in a stimulating discussion of clothes at the Ritz-Carlton roof garden.

No mental antagonism was ever between the generations. No rebellious desire on the part of Youth to break with tradition and venture down by-paths of radical taste.

The daughters were, in fact, slightly more conservative than their mothers. It was a mother who said:

"That designer was trying to be daring, but she wasn't quite daring enough."

Socialite Jury

The distinguished jury of socially prominent mothers and daughters invited to Fashion Congress session was headed by Mrs. Walter H. Byron of Weston.

The other judges were: Miss Betsy Byron, Mrs. Winthrop Scudder of Brookline and Miss Sally Scudder, Mrs. Harry Britton Little and Miss Mimi Little, Mrs. Storer P. Ware and Miss Betty Ware, Miss Frances Cove and Mrs. Parkman D. Howe.

Explaining the lack of disagreement which existed between the mature and less mature points of view one of the mother-judges said:

"I think it's because Bostonian standards of good taste are so simple and so fundamentally fine that it's practically impossible to disagree violently on what is correct and stylish. Allowing, of course, for purely personal preferences, as in the matter of colors and such."

With true Bostonian dicctness these Social Register matrons and their attractive daughters were steadfast in their principles of good taste.

Simplicity Rules

Simplicity, fine fabrics, expert workmanship and complete absence of "fussy" details or confused design won their patrician vote every time.

"It's only when our daughters are in their teens," another mother said, "that we find ourselves in disagreement with them in matters of clothes. It's because they haven't yet learned to discard the theatrical and extreme and to realize that true chic lies in simplicity and appropriateness."

Yesterday's fashion session was an exciting glimpse of newest style developments for fall. When the first tang of autmn reaches Boston the smartly dressed woman will be wearing one of the new silhouettes endorsed yesterday by the jurors.

The Princess silhouette, with its flared skirt and high tiny waistline, will be important in the fashion scene. Even the reefer will take on its feminine, flattering lines in a costume such as that modeled by Evelyn Hassman, charming post-debutante mannequin.

The Princess line reefer modeled by Miss Hassman was part of a stunning three-piece suit in flat herringbone tweed. With it she wore one of the dashing new high-crowned hats made of black felt.

Lampshade Type

The cutaway tunic, or "lampshade" silhouette will also be a dominating feature of the fall fashion parade. Marietta Howe made immediate converts to this smart new silhouette when she appeared before the judges in a svelte cut-away tunic suit made of a delectable twin tweed.

Slate blue, a distinguished new fall shade, appeared in a three-piece suit modeled by Mrs. Winthrop Brown (Peggy Wright). The color was particularly effective on the attractive model, first bride of the debutante season, but it was voted a becoming shade for almost any type of coloring.

When Dorothy Watters, attractive brunette mannequin appeared in a Fall-1936 mink coat there were wistful sighs from every feminine heart present. The coat had the full elbows, tight cuffs, raglan treatment of shoulders and slight fullness which marks it definitely of the coming season.

Stores Exhibiting

It was this coat which brought out the only slight difference in point of view between mothers and daughters. It was the matter of age limits for wearing mink. Most of the mothers thought that only married women and post-post debutantes should wear mink, while the daughters agreed that they would wear mink at the tender age of 20 if they were only allowed to do so!

The stores which exhibited at yesterday's session were: Jordan Marsh Company, Kennedy's, C. F. Hovey Company, Jay's, Manahan, Chandler and Company, Lamson and Hubbard, Plotkin Brothers, Fredley's and C. Crawford Hollidge.

Hospital Patients Unaware of Fire

Investigation of a fire in the clothes chute at the Vose House, nurses home at City Hospital, was started today.

Despite the blaze, extinguished with slight damage, hospital patients were unware of the fire. Many of the nurses, asleep at the time, were aroused.

CHAPTER 61

"KATHERINE HAS pointed out a danger of which I was aware," my father said sonorously. "but one which I had thought could be best taken care of here.

"She has persuaded me, however, that it can best be averted elsewhere, and, in addition, she has promised that, if we adopt her plan, she will stay with the children until I return or—until I return."

I did not miss the inadvertent "or," but I clenched my fist into my palms to keep from betraying the old terror for my father's safety, and the new, even more poignant one which his words had engendered in my mind.

"You mean," I said steadily, "that you fear probable danger for the children during this—experiment—of yours?"

"Not probable," he rejoined hastily, "but possible, yes, although the chances are that nothing will disturb the peaceful routine of life in the farm house. But, as I do not wish to take even the thousandth chance, I am agreeing with alacrity to her plan, as is Richard. We are only waiting for your consent."

REPLIES PROMPTLY

My response was as prompt as I could make it.

"You do not need to wait another second," I said. "I consent even before I know what it is. But," I added a bit childishly, "I would like—"

"To know what all the shooting's for," Dicky interposed, and the comradely smile in sent me banished my vague but carefully bidden resentment at not being one of the original consultants concerning this plan which, I realized from my father's words, must mean taking the children away from the farmhouse.

"Of course," my father said hastily. "But Katherine can tell you about it better than we can. It is her plan."

AN ODD COMBINATION

"It is not a premeditated one," Katherine said, looking steadily at me.

She drew a long breath and spoke crisply.

"I want to take the three children to a little mountain lake I know in New Hampshire, and stay there until the emergency is past. Indeed, I can't think of anything better for them than to keep them there all summer. The air is so dry and healthful up there, and it has been so damp down here this spring. Both Junior and Roderick have had colds on and off, you know. They're free from them just now, and I would like to keep them free."

MADGE'S SPIRITS LIFTED

As always, when I hear the words "mountain" or "lake," and especially in conjunction, I felt an unaccountable thrill, and a distinct lifting of my spirits. I often have wondered fancifully, if in some former existence, I was mountain-born and bred, or if my ancestors came from the highlands, and my emotions are atavistic.

SHE LAUDS PLAN

Whatever the cause, I am always supremely happy when I can sojourn among mountain scenery and scriptural texts which seems to me the most beautiful in the majestic couplet, "I will lift mine eyes unto the hills, from which cometh my help."

"It sounds like a most marvelous plan to me," I said sincerely. "When do you plan to go, and how can I help you?"

"I haven't planned a single detail yet," she said. "As I told you, the idea just struck me while you were talking to me."

"You can work all the details out together," my father said. "I can hold off my brother's arrival here for several days, or until you get back, Margaret. But you ought to start as early as possible tomorrow morning. The rest I leave to you."

RETURN TO NURSERY

There was a distinct accent of dismissal in his voice, and the same hint tinged the bow he made us when he had finished speaking. Katherine and I rose immediately, and Dicky and my father sped us on our way with such expeditious courtesy that we were in the corridor with the door closed behind us, before we fairly knew what had happened.

"He has planned that I should go with you!" I asked breathlessly as we started down the hall to the nursery.

Katherine put a steadying hand on my arm.

"Let's wait until we get into the nursery," she said in low tones. "I don't want Faith's grandmother to know anything about this until we're almost ready to go."

"Right you are!" I answered. "But what about Mary?"

"She'll have to know," Katherine said surprisingly. "We'll have to take her along."

FATS ARE a double menace to summer slimming—they add fuel and pounds. To keep cool and get slim, delete the fats from your summer menus.

Our summer lessons in dietetics will be light—it's too hot to concentrate—but it will help you to know that fats actually double your hot weather troubles. Food is fuel, and just as coal burns with a hotter fire than wood, so certain foods give off more heat than others.

The fuel value of a food is expressed in calories, and a food high in calories is both heat-producing and fattening. Fats count as high in fuel calories as carbohydrates and proteins combined. One ounce of fat contains 225 calories, while one ounce of either carbohydrate or protein yields only 113 calories.

In terms of food, this means butter is twice as fattening as the same amount of sugar, and cream is more than twice as fattening as milk. One cup of thin cream contains 440 calories, while one cup of whole milk contains 160 calories. Skimming the milk to delete all fats leaves only 80 calories per glass.

Low Calorie Coolness

As you know, although the average reducer leaves off the starchy potato, which looks large and has a fattening reputation, she liberally butters her morning toast. Yet a large potato contains no more calories than one small pat of butter.

Another mistaken idea is to leave bread out of the diet and eat the fat on the meat. You need whole grain bread for Vitamin B, and an average slice contains only 75 calories. The fat on the meat is pure fat—and pounds.

Since fats have 2¼ times the fuel value of other elements, you should use as little as possible in a summer diet, and particularly in a reducing diet. However, this doesn't apply to butter and fat meat. Fat cheese in many delectable forms, such as shortening in pastries, it slips into custards and sauces, and the more fat in a food the higher its calories in proportion to weight.

Summer Slimming

Summer fruits and vegetables contain no fat, but are high in the protective elements and are made to order for summer slimming. Of course, as we have told you before, if you add fat, in the form of mayonnaise, to salads and butter vegetables, don't blame a fruit and vegetable diet when it makes you warm and cumbersome about the waistline.

In-between-meal calories count least when taken in the form of fresh fruit. Many favorite hot weather drinks contain fat, and it is easy to slip in extra calories in sodas, chocolate drinks and ice creams. These extras count double.

Keep within your daily calorie requirements by careful selection of your food, and don't week-end too much!

I'll be seeing you . . . lighter!

Supply the finishing touch to your summer salad with one of the dressings found in the leaflet, "Reducer's Salad Dressing."

LEWIS HANEY ON POLITICS

Landon Talks Shows G. O. P. CANDIDATE STANDS For Common Sense

By LEWIS HANEY
(Professor of Economics, New York University)

New York, July 29—In politics I am absolutely independent. I am just an economist.

It may therefore be of interest to some to know that, having read and re-read Gov. Landon's acceptance speech, I can honestly say that I consider it great.

It is not great as an oration or as announcing new ideas. It is great in the Cleveland or, perhaps, the Lincoln sense. In a time when millions of us are running after false prophets, and following the broad and easy way to dependence upon "the government," Landon prays for the gift of simple, straightforward speech and says, "there is no future on the relief rolls."

While the Roosevelts and Coughlins rant, incite, and promise, Landon stands for honesty and common sense. I can understand Landon. I don't know what the others will do next.

As I read it, the Landon program rests upon two basic principles.

First, he says that "a free competitive system is necessary to a free government." By this he means that unless we individuals are free to exercise choice and initiative in our economic affairs we cannot be free in our political affairs. He says: "the real test is to be found in the ability of the average American to engage in business. To obtain a job, to be self-supporting and a self-respecting member of his community."

* * *

There is no hunk about every man being a king, or more abundant life for all. Landon says that what we want and can have is "a fair chance for all to earn their share" (note the last two words.)

So he calls a halt to "intimidation and hostility" on the part of government. He would dispel fear and restore confidence by freeing individual initiative in business and by sound definite, and insistent policies in government.

He stands for economy, as against debt and taxes. He stands for abundant production and productive employment, as against National Recovery Administration and triple-A policies. He stands for the recovery of lost foreign markets.

He stands for freeing us from "arbitrary and uncertain monetary policies" which destroy individual thrift and saving.

And he will not stand for monopoly, Landon says: "through a vigorous enforcement of the anti-trust laws, we must be freed from private monopolistic control." This is essential to the free competitive system and equal opportunity.

* * *

Second, Landon states this great principle: "the government must maintain itself in the position of an umpire."

Its function is to protect the public interest and to mediate between conflicting groups.

When we let class disputes, as in labor or farm matters, get into a tangle and then rush them to the doorstep of the President, says he, we get into a bad way. He means that we then get dictation, government intimidation and excessive expenditures.

"Keep it all out of politics," is Landon's slogan. (I believe we are ready to follow that.)

Both these basic principles find expression in the stand on "relief." The governor's whole philosophy is in his simple statement: "Those who need relief will get it."

He will not give "relief" to buy votes. He will give it when and where it is needed.

BANKING Practice ILLEGAL

SUPREME COURT DECIDES

Hartford, Conn., July 29 (INS)—A practice followed for thirty-five years without legal sanction by many Connecticut trust companies, and involving millions of dollars in trust funds, was declared illegal today by the Connecticut Supreme Court of Errors in one of the most important banking decisions it has handed down.

The high court outlawed the practice of trust companies to invest trust funds in mortgages held in their corporate names, because in so doing it became both payee and guarantee, instead of acting in their capacity merely as financial agents.

However, fear of possible huge losses expressed by bankers at arguments in the case, were shated by the decision which held the plaintiff could recover only losses which resulted because the note and mortgage were taken in the individual name of the company, not losses due to general business conditions.

* * *

The decision, written by Chief Justice William M. Maltbie, criticized the periodic examinations of banks as being inadequate because there is nothing to prevent "a dishonest official between examinations from illegally disposing of trust funds held in the name of the bank."

"Trust funds should not only be kept independent of individual and other trust funds, but the investment thereof should, so far as possible, be clearly defined, and at all times stamped with the individual trust to which they belong," stated the decision.

It was returned in the action brought by the Chapter House Corp. of the King's Daughters against the Hartford National Bank and Trust Company, to recover damages for alleged breach of trust. The decision ruled Superior Court Judge Ernest C. Simpson erred in awarding $7,962.50 damages on an investment of $6,500 and directed the Superior court to enter damages for the plaintiff after proof of losses under the opinion, otherwise to find for the defendant bank.

Seven per cent decisions were handed down by the high court.

U. S. STRIKES IN 1935 BY INDUSTRIES

There were 2014 strikes in the United States in 1935, the largest number in any year since 1921. Workers involved in the 1935 strikes numbered 1,117,213.

The solid bars on the left-hand side of the chart shows the total number of strikes classified according to industries. The hatched bars on the right-hand side of the chart show the total number of employes in each of the industries involved in the 1935 strikes.

Nearly 25 per cent (497) of the strikes in 1935 were in the textile industries, which employ 200,000 workers.

Transportation and communication classified as one industry experienced 198 strikes, building and construction 139, trade group 130, lumber 135 and food 105.

Strikes in the mining industries affected 479,500 workers, nearly 44 per cent of the total number of employes in all industries which suffered strike troubles last year. This was due to the bituminous coal strike in September, 1935.

According to the Bureau of Labor statistics, the major issues in 47.3 per cent of the strikes that occurred in 1935 were union recognition and union organization. The major issues of 38 per cent of the strikes were wages and hours. Relatively few strikes were called because of unsatisfactory working hours.

SURPLUS Problem STUDIED

ECONOMIC PLANNING

By MERRYLE STANLEY RUKEYSER
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

New York, July 29 (US) — Apparently economic planning this year is in the hands of the weather man rather than the politician.

The severe drouth, in creating a relative scarcity of basic agricultural staples, appears to promise a price roughly in parity with industrial quotations.

In the past, the country has always emerged from economic depressions. Two factors were involved. First, temporary disturbances to economic balance have been corrected by acts of Providence or otherwise. Secondly, human ingenuity, operating through science and invention, has improved efficiency of production.

With politicians floundering as to technique of benefiting the farmer is balance, weather conditions have been filling the gap. This is not to say that the drouth is an unmixed economic blessing. As a matter of fact, it raises some serious long term problems. Likewise, it necessitates considerable relief to human beings and livestock. But it dispels the specter of surpluses, which had been disturbing to an equilibrium with the new tax structure. From present appearances, the drouth is likely to result in a net increase rather than a cut, in total farm income. If this expectation is fulfilled, the basis for further broad economic recovery during the second half of the year is in sight.

Youth movements reflect a desire for having the world through prodigal government spending.

Perhaps this is because youth, temporarily dispossessed by the depression, feels that it constitutes the army of "have-nots."

But in a fundamental sense, youth should be most concerned about excessive public spending. For, in truth, youth will soon inherit the earth, including the accumulated debts.

If the debt burden is excessive, it means that when youngsters grow up they will have to forego a substantial part of the fruits of their work as they pay the debt.

Part of youthful earnings, or purchasing power, will go through the visible and invisible tax route. Youthful purchasing power will be diverted in part to service the federal and other governmental debt now being avidly accumulated.

Older folk, who are more sensitive to the hazard of excessive debt, will be relieved from the burden by factors operating in accord with the American experience table.

The question of farm aid revolves around the question as to who is to foot the bill. The same direct or indirect load the benefits into the price of agricultural products, making the consumer pay. Undoubtedly the consumer would be willing to pay a little more for the food, if by so doing he could assure economic balance which would provide steady employment. As a matter of fact, the average worker, who owns an automobile, spends $300 for taxes, operating expenses, and depreciation on his car—an amount equal to the total family expenditure for food.

An alternative method is to provide benefits out of general taxation. This, however, would be regarded as class legislation. Moreover, it overlooks the basic fact that in our modern economic society workers give employment to one another through interchanging the products of their hours of labor. This technique attempts to introduce extraneous factors into the economy.

Apparently the vicious punitive undivided profits tax is starting a fashion of excessive dividend declarations. Thus, in the very administration, which sought to protect the investor through legislation creating the Securities and Exchange Commission, seemingly puts a premium on liquidation rather than on a wildcat corporate dividend policy. In the past, economic progress—and a rising standard of living—was promoted by prudent corporate savings, which provided perfecting machinery, which aids human beings in production, has been regarded by all considered fiscal legislation.

$1 U. S. Steel Preferred Dividend

New York, July 29 (AP)—A 50-cent boost to $1 in the quarterly dividend on preferred stock of the United States Steel Corp., in the wake of mounting earnings focussed renewed attention in financial circles today on corporate fiscal policies under the new Federal Revenue Act.

For the first time in five years "Big Steel" in the three months ended June 30 showed earnings for its common stock, with profit equivalent to 75 cents a share after allowing for the full $1.75 dividend due on the senior stock.

But directors late yesterday voted to pay only $1 on the preferred stock and to credit $8,259,612 to the surplus account to offset some of the heavy depression drain on reserves while the corporation was running in the red.

The withholding of the major part of earnings for reserves raised the question in some quarters whether the steel corporation, with profits definitely on the upturn, would elect to rebuild its shrunken surplus before graduated federal levies upon undivided profits.

Factory Output Extends Gains

The expansion of factory output which occurred during the last three years was extended in the first quarter of 1936. The average monthly output this year was 50.8 per cent above the 1932 level.

This increase in output, however, was not accompanied by a corresponding increase in the total number of man-hours worked since there was a gain of 57 per cent in the output per man-hour. While total production increased 50.8 per cent, the total number of man-hours worked increased only 30.3 per cent, according to the American Institute of Steel Construction.

The number of hours worked per week by each wage earner showed practically no change, 37.4 hours in 1936 as against 37.3 hours in 1932. Consequently, the increase in employment practically corresponded to the increase in the total number of man-hours worked and was thus considerably smaller than the gain in output.

Wall Street Sidelights

New York, July 29—Atchison, Topeka & Santa Fe Railway, with a substantial gross gain as compared with a year ago, improved its operating net showing in June.

The road's gross of $13,297,000 for the month was over $2,547,000 above the $10,779,000 for June 1935, and carrying a large part of this increase to net operating income, the operating net figure was $1,787,000, an increase of $787,000 over the $1,000,000 of a year ago. While Atchison's first 1936 half gross of $69,496,000 is $7,907,000 above the like 1935 half, its first half operating net of $3,734,000 is $993,000 under a year ago.

Rail Passenger Revenue Trend

An indication as to the trend of railroad passenger revenues in the East under the new 2-cent fares is given in the operating report of Pennsylvania Railroad for June. The old 3.6 cents per mile basic passenger fare was dropped, and the new rates of 2 cents in coaches and 3 cents in Pullmans were adopted June 1 of this year. The Penney's June passenger revenues showed a gain of 8.6 per cent over June, 1935, while in May under the old basic rate, passenger revenues were 30.6 per cent above the like 1935 month. Statisticians say the Eastern roads must carry nine passengers where they carried five before, to make passenger revenue volume under the new rates equal the old.

Fall Financing for Southern Indiana Gas

Although no information of an official nature is obtainable it is known that financing plans for the Southern Indiana Gas & Electric Company are being considered. The details will not be decided upon for some weeks, it was said in well-informed quarters, and the offering of the new securities is unlikely before the Fall. The funded debt of the company, which is a subsidiary of the Commonwealth & Southern Corporation, consists of $5,500,000 of first mortgage 5½ per cent bonds due in 1957.

Plans to Market Oil From Rumania Abroad

As an aftermath of the Italian-Ethiopian imbroglio come reports of investment in the market for oil from Rumania. This may seem like a matter of little interest to those who look to American petroleum market and the companies affected by it, but it is a potentially important factor in export markets in which various American oil companies participate. The Italian campaign stimulated the consumption of Rumanian oil. With the end of hostilities this demand has been greatly curtailed and plans are underatood now to be under consideration for the marketing of a corresponding amount of the Rumanian output in other countries. The commission from that country is reported on the way to London now to present its case for the marketing of the oil.

Maine Central R. R. Reports Deficit

Maine Central Railroad reports for June a deficit after charges of $113,655, which compares with a surplus after charges of $32,356 in June, 1935.

There was a decrease in revenues amounting to $38,178, and an increase in expenses of $91,187. Freight revenue was $24,638, or 3.32 per cent less than in June, 1935, when there was an abnormal movement of potatoes. The principal increase in the expense item was $51,158 in maintenance of way.

Passenger revenues in the first month of the new low fares showed a decrease of 4.35 per cent. Statement by the road said: The passenger showing is encouraging. It was feared that we carried more passengers than last June.

Definite comparisons of the effect of the new low fares cannot be made, however, until we are able to restore normal service on the route between Portland and Bangor via Augusta which is still prevented by lack of a bridge swept away by the flood between Brunswick and Topsham.

MEMBER BANKS' Loans Drop

Condition statement of weekly reporting member banks in 101 leading cities on July 22 shows a decrease for the week of $68,000,000 in total loans and investments, increases of $99,000,000 in reserve balances with Federal Reserve Banks, of $111,000,000 in demand deposits adjusted and of $15,000,000 in time deposits, and a decrease of $144,000,000 in deposit balances standing to the credit of domestic banks.

Gain in State Bank Deposits

The composite statement of June 30, 1936, of 481 state banks of Massachusetts, issued by Commissioner of Banks Henry H. Pierce, shows total resources of $3,407,000,000, exclusive of trust department assets totaling $1,055,000,000, reflecting a gain in deposits of approximately $95,500,000.

Although earnings, due to lower yield on mortgages and investments, showed $600,000 less than a year ago, substantial amounts have been added to surplus and guaranty accounts.

Holdings in government securities increased $130,000,000 during the year. Commissioner Pierce states that the statement shows banks to be a very liquid condition, holding cash, U. S. government bonds and other securities of nearly $1,500,000,000, giving ample evidence of available funds to care for legitimate loan requirements and new real estate developments.

Wall Street Hears

New York, July 29 (INS)—That Standard Brands (SB) is expected to earn 54 cents a share for the first half, against 41 cents a year ago.

That some increase in the National Lead (LT) dividend rate is looked for later in the year.

MARKET WEEK

Apparel MADE IN N. E. Boosted

By HUGH E. BRADSHAW

Boston Wholesale Apparel concerns are going to have a Market Week beginning next Monday during which products made and sold in New England will be featured.

The purpose obviously is to stimulate interest in apparel of local manufacture and should go a long way towards demonstrating the importance of this section as a manufacturing center.

While the event is the first of its kind interest is already reported running high and a good sized attendance seems assured. The wholesalers are to be complimented on their publicizing of New England products and will undoubtedly benefit local manufacturers and workers as well as themselves.

State St. interest in Goodall Worsted continues to grow. The latest report in the street is that the company will show net profits for the year ending July 31 double those of the previous 10 months. This action with its fiscal year is occasioned by the change in the fiscal year initiated in 1935. On a pure basis this will mean the estimate means close to $12 will be shown. Directors are scheduled to meet for dividend action in a day or so and local financial circles are waiting to see how much is paid in order to obtain a better idea of probable results for the full year.

* * *

Notebook: All the talk about electrical equipment stocks is centered around General Electric and Westinghouse—confirmed on notice that Allis Chalmers and Cutler Hammer have been moving ahead without any fanfare . . . And these two are pretty close to being the aristocrats of the group . . . Carrier Corporation on the curb is expected to show at least 75 cents per share by its more ardent boosters . . . The coal companies had a poor time of it last year . . . But talk of price advances for next winter is generating interest.

* * *

For the present we would suspend buying operations and watch the stock market closely for signals of a reaction. For the balance of the week we suggest close attention to the behavior of utility issues. Erratic fluctuations on moderately heavy volume will definitely hint that a dip is nearby. And the best bets for a session or two we will not be surprised if two to four points are shaved off the averages. The volatile, high priced stocks in particular impress us as needing some correction.

* * *

Ticker Ticks: The in-between price brackets look to be in the best position . . . And on reactions we prefer stocks which have fall under this heading . . . Making selections from the market stocks listed here earlier this week . . . With emphasis on the rails . . . For this is the group . . . And will have no excuse for failing to vault over 1933 highs . . . Should rails fail then the whole market will probably fall back and seek a new base from which to make a new start.

Swift & Co. Elects New Head

Directors of Swift & Company today announced the election of O. E. Jones as vice-president in charge of lard, vegetable oil refineries, cottonseed oil mills and gins, margarine and animal fats dressings.

Mr. Jones' first job with Swift & Company was in the accounting department. In the three years that he remained in this work he was stationed at various branch house points, including Clinton, Ia.; Cincinnati, O., and finally at Chicago. He entered the selling and of the business at Lincoln, Neb., going from there to Oklahoma City, Okla., and later coming to Chicago.

He is one of the best known men in the entire field and has been associated with the company for more than 24 years, and in his particular field since 1917. Mr. Jones has taken an active part in enlarging the market for cottonseed products, and has been a director of the National Cottonseed Products Association, and a member of the Institute of Cottonseed Oil Foods.

PROFIT TAKING DULLED

New York, July 29 — Strength of selected issues tended to dull profit taking in today's stock market after the steels and other recent leaders had been whittled down for sizable declines.

Industrial news continued to keep sentiment bullish but the length of the recovery in equities, with only minor interruptions, apparently induced speculative forces to try for a technical reaction.

The list was unsettled early by a drop of about 10 points in U. S. Steel common and preferred, Bethlehem, Youngstown Sheet & Tube, General Motors, Chrysler and Du Pont. Most had reduced their losses near the fourth hour, however, in relatively slow dealings.

Aircraft rallied after the opening and were followed by a number of the rails, utilities and specialties.

Ahead as much as 2 points were Douglas Aircraft, Boeing, United Aircraft, Sperry, Curtiss-Wright, Allied Chemical, Peoples Gas, American Telephone, Anaconda, American Smelting, Santa Fe, Southern Railway, Delaware & Hudson, Beneficial Loan, Newport Industries, Westinghouse Electric, Johnson & Johnson and International Telephone.

Grains pointed sharply higher and cotton dropped. Bonds and foreign currencies were irregular.

Timely Topics

Liveliness of the aviation shares was coincident with Boeing's third quarter statement disclosing a sizable net profit as against a loss in the same 1935 months.

Although there was no appreciable response, the reported seizure of foreign property by the Spanish government was a matter of concern to the bondholding companies with holdings in Spain.

The report of the U. S. Steel Corp. subsidiary for the first part of earnings on the common stock issue was the principal subject of discussion in the boardroom prior to the opening.

The improvement in the steel industry over the past several months was confirmed by "iron age" which said stocks on hand of the mills have sufficient orders booked to insure an operating rate around present levels through August.

Industry stockholders were not particularly disturbed by a slight decline in power production. While output for the week ended July 25 was under that of the previous week, it registered a gain of 14.3 per cent over the corresponding 1935 period. The minor recession was due to comparison with the week in which the country was in the grip of a heat wave.

Sterling was up 3-16 of a cent at $5.02, at the beginning of foreign exchange transactions, and the French franc was .00¼ of a cent easier at 6.60⅝ cents.

Profit Shown

Radio-Keith-Orpheum Corp. reports for 26 weeks ended June 27 profit of $734,492.

Comments of Brokers

It seems unlikely that stocks wholly paid for and lodged in strong boxes will come on the market in volume unless adverse conditions are very important. Even so, relatively slow dealings, not in sufficient volume to greatly disturb prices.—Blake Brothers & Co.

There is no apparent change in the generally favorable character of the stock market's performance. Any setback now would probably be small and shortlived.—H. D. Connor, Paine, Webber & Co.

If there is any activity on the downside it will probably be advisable for traders to lighten up.—J. S. Wilson, Josephthal & Co.

Insofar as new trading commitments among the industrials are concerned, we would be inclined to favor the medium priced stocks for the time being, until the more volatile high priced issues have had an opportunity to digest their recent gains.—J. E. Malloy, Hornblower & Weeks.

There is no reason to expect a sharp break now but will work beyond technical limitations at this time.—R. S. Feigus, Prentice, Elsbach & Brady.

There has been some evidence of increasing outside interest in the market recently and this should be added to when the summer trade influences are out of the way. Under such a condition only a bullish policy is possible.—J. P. Maher, Shields & Co.

1936 Pontiac 8

Refinements, Features Balanced in '36 Pontiac-8

AS TOLD TO JAMES H. DODGE

Automobile Editor

By HERBERT D. WILSON

In the belief that most of our readers are interested in the performance characteristics of certain automobile models, we have held a series of conversations with Herbert D. Wilson, nationally-known tester of the Hearst organization, who has just completed personal tests of the 1936 automobiles. His reactions will be set down in detailed stories that will form a weekly feature each Wednesday in the Boston American. The eleventh of this series, carried herewith, is on the Pontiac 8.

A prominent automotive engineer recently said that with the present day high development of engineering skill and manufacturing technique it is possible to build into a car an exaggerated characteristic along almost any line that one could name. Such an accomplishment, as a matter of fact, is not nearly so difficult as the designing of a product in which there is a well balanced relation between the various aspects of performance, style, comfort and economy.

He said that as an example one could take the characteristics of speed, acceleration, performance and economy, all of which bear definite relations to one another, and beyond a certain point no one of these characteristics could be built into a car except at the expense of something else. Thus, excessive power must of necessity bring with it a higher operating cost, and all other things being equal, speed, beyond a certain point, penalizes other features of performance.

From this it seemed clear to him that the manufacturer who desired to build for permanency must aim at a skillful blending of all these ingredients in proportions that will most nearly meet the needs of the customer and at the same time conform to sound principles of engineering design and construction.

While testing the Pontiac 8 last week I recalled these pertinent remarks, for in this car I found an interesting balance of refinements and features.

WHEELBASE—116¼ inches.

TIRE SIZE—6.50x16.

85-MILE SPEED

The car was powered with an 87-horsepower straight eight motor of remarkable smoothness which drove the car at an average speed of 86 miles an hour on the test straightaway, yet gave an economical mileage per gallon throughout the entire trip. Factory tests show the following gasoline economy at various speed ranges.

	Miles per gallon
30 miles per hour	21.7
40 miles per hour	19.1
50 miles per hour	16.8
60 miles per hour	14.9
70 miles per hour	13.8
80 miles per hour	11.4

These figures are the result of expert engineering tests under conditions such as a perfectly level road, accurately tuned engine, just the right temperature, absolutely consistent speed, no interference from traffic and driving both ways of the road to cancel the effects of wind.

Acceleration also was good, for I made from 20 to 60 miles in high gear in an average of 16 seconds. So smooth was the flow of power throughout the entire speed range that only several stop-watch checkings proved to me the accuracy of the figures.

OIL ECONOMY

Engine changes include a marked improvement in oil economy, which increased the oil mileage as much as 25 per cent. Full length water jackets reduce oil temperature as much as 45 degrees at high speed. The crankcase ventilating system has a larger capacity, while connecting rods and pistons have likewise been improved.

Taking the car over an exceedingly rough test road I hit the stretch at 60 miles an hour, encountering rutty asphalt full of chuck holes and a quantity of loose gravel. The car rode unusually well and required very little guiding despite the inequalities in the road.

Later, on the test straight-away, one tire developed a fast leak through a nail puncture and went flat at 80 miles an hour. No difficulty was experienced in braking the car to a straight-line stop.

The knee-action wheels that performed so admirably on this test run are of the compact type encased in a strong, weather-tight steel housing. Coil springs, shock absorbers and accompanying mechanism work within this case in a bath of oil.

EASY RIDE SECRET

The front wheels are supported by two strong arms extending from the spring units. The units themselves are rigidly bolted to the frame by means of a kingpin support.

This time-tried and owner-tested design is one of the secrets of Pontiac's easy ride. It allows the wheels to rise and fall over bumps and into depressions without transmitting shock from one front wheel to another or to the rear wheels, at the same time removing any tendency to shimmy, and allows the car to travel with the least amount of effort in a straight line, as though the car were on rails.

Road shocks are eliminated from the steering wheel through a greatly improved steering linkage made possible by knee-action. The danger of accidents from slowouts is minimized, as actually shown in the test, and as a result the car is decidedly safer.

The exterior of the car has been improved by slight but important changes. The distinctive chromium plated grille bars which flow back off the hood have been accentuated by eliminating the grille joint at either side in favor of the less noticeable knife-edged horizontal grille members incepered to match the body.

TRIMMER EFFECT

By attaching the headlamps to the radiator shell and by eliminating the small fender lamps, a trimmer and cleaner effect has been obtained at the front end. Parking bulbs formerly carried in the small fender lights are now within the headlamps and an indicator red jewel light at the base of the speedometer lights up whenever both upper beams of the headlights are in use.

Front doors are hinged at the front because the majority of owners prefer them the way. Running boards are all rubber reinforced with steel. Rear lamps are mounted on the fenders instead of on the luggage compartment door, as on preceding models. Rear fenders are wider and rear bumpers longer.

A new transmission, with silent helical gears throughout, has been adopted. Gear teeth have a higher finish than formerly and a tremendously improved clutch action is obtained by the use of a plate which has several crimped steel spring cushions under one of the facings.

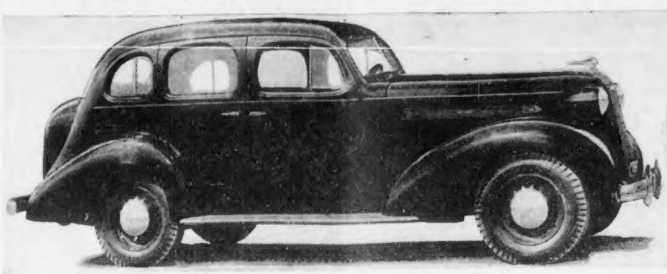
This new clutch is a real joy and, in my opinion, one of the biggest improvements in the 1936 car. All former Pontiac owners who have not tried this clutch should do so at once.

BAR GAS THEFT

One of the smaller improvements which is very interesting is the theft-proof gas-line tank wherein the syphoning of gasoline is prevented by the simple expedient of installing a spiral spring in the filler pipe. It does not interfere with filling, but a syphon tube cannot be pushed past it. An ingeniously designed filler cap prevents loss of fuel through the vent when rounding turns.

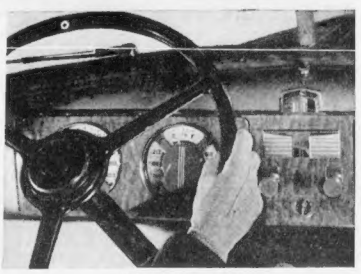
The instrument board is an attractive new design in burled poplar. Speedometer and instruments are placed in a panel in front of the driver. Gasoline, oil gauges, and thermometer are pleasingly grouped under a glass face corresponding in size with the speedometer. Instead of an ammeter a red jewel lights up when the battery is discharging.

I am sure that you are going to find the 1936 Pontiac a pleasure to drive under all conditions. From radiator cap to baggage compartment in the rear it is beautiful to look at and the powerful motor under the hood can cope with any situation. Quiet and flexible, easy to drive, remarkable in riding qualities, the 1936 Pontiac will prove a useful automotive companion for any family.



1936 PONTIAC STRAIGHT 8, 4-DOOR TOURING SEDAN

Retaining its sweeping, distinctive lines, the new Pontiac 8 features slight but important exterior changes which have greatly enhanced its overall appearance. By attaching the headlamps to the radiator shell and by eliminating the small fender lamps a trimmer and cleaner effect has been obtained at the front end.



INSTRUMENT PANEL

The Pontiac burled poplar instrument panel is an interesting modern treatment in the new car. Clear, large dials enhance its beauty.

SWAMP KILLING LAID TO WOMAN

Peabody, July 29—The axe victim of the South Peabody marshes was probably murdered and bound up by a woman. The disposition of the body was taken care of by a male associate in the woman's fiendish crime.

This was the opinion of Medical Examiners Joseph W. P. Murphy and Cornelius Kiley, of Peabody, today after a third examination of the left leg and right pelvis bones of the victim of a dissection killing.

The theory that a woman was the killer was advanced by the medical examiners, who said there was definite evidence the leg bone had been severed from the hip joint by a hatchet swung by a person of not too much strength.

After an all night conference involving Chief Edward F. Pierce, State Detectives William F. Murray and Richard Griffin and District Attorney Hugh A. Cregg definite arrangements were completed for the summoning of a detail of 25 state troopers to assist Peabody police officers in the search of the swampland surrounding Brown's pond.

Skeleton Mystery In Natick

Natick, July 29—A skeleton mystery caused a stir here today, but in spite of a lot of hard work by police and public works employes, the case became more mysterious instead of less.

Henry McCullum, of Shawmut avenue, Boston, told police he and another workman yesterday found a four-foot skeleton in the bottom of a gas tank which is being razed. He said they threw it with other debris in an excavation.

The debris was carefully sifted but no bones were found and while McCullum stuck to his story, search was begun for his fellow workman, who did not come to work today, as a possible means of solving the mystery of what became of the skeleton.

D. C. MULLONEY MOTHER DIES

Mrs. Mary Louise Mulloney, 78, of Magnolia, mother of Daniel C. Mulloney, former banker now serving a term in Plymouth Jail, died today at Addison-Gilbert Hospital, Gloucester, after a long illness.

Last week the banker, who is serving a year and a day for misapplication of $131,000 in funds of the Federal National Bank, was taken to Gloucester from Plymouth to visit his mother at the hospital.

Today, when she died, the banker was not at the hospital.

The death of Mrs. Mulloney was ascribed to complications growing out of a fall some time ago, in which she fractured her hip. She had been in the hospital since.

One son, John Mulloney lives in Boston. There are two others, one a monsignor in South Dakota and the other living in Ohio.

Limoges Marriage Annulled

Salem, July 29—The marriage of Eugene J. Limoges, 47, a Lawrence night club proprietor, to Mrs. Mary Walter-Limoges, was null and void, Judge Edward B. O'Brien ruled today.

And the contention of Mrs. Walter-Limoges, that she was Limoges' lawful wife, was "not sustained," the court decided. Therefore her divorce petition was dismissed.

In this fashion Judge O'Brien unscrambled the marital mixup that has been in the courts for years, a mixup that involved three wives, two husbands and seven children. It was unscrambled as far as Limoges is concerned, anyhow.

When Mrs. Walters-Limoges sued the night club proprietor for divorce, she charged unfaithfulness and named Emma Even Limoges, a Lawrence girl that Limoges had married at Salem, N. H.

But Limoges, justifying his later marriage and defending himself on the divorce allegations, countercharged that Mrs. Walters-Limoges, whom he had wed in 1924, was never legally his wife.

As a surprise witness, Limoges produced Alfred Walters of Rochester, N. Y., who astonished the courtroom by asserting that he was the common law husband and father of Mrs. Walters-Limoges' four children.

Walters said that he and the woman were recognized as husband and wife since 1895 under New York laws, but they hadn't seen each other since 1904. To make it more complicated, Walters himself had remarried and is now father of four other children.

T. M. REILLY DIES AT 54

Timothy M. Reilly, 54, father of Frank Reilly of the Boston Evening American staff, was dead today, at his home, 69 Brookline street, South End, after a lingering illness.

Funeral services will be conducted from the family home tomorrow morning with a solemn high mass of requiem at the Cathedral of the Holy Cross at 9:45 a. m. Interment will be in St. Joseph's Cemetery, West Roxbury.

Prior to his retirement six years ago, Mr. Reilly was president of Reilly Bros., Inc., pioneers in the Boston chain restaurant business.

Incendiary Hint In Forest Fire

Havre, Mont., July 29 (AP)—Authorities checked reports of incendiarism today as a thousand men fought to control a forest fire that fatally burned three men and destroyed thousands of acres of timber southeast of here.

Tronical Storm Heads in Again

Miami, Fla., July 29 (AP)—The tropical storm which cut across extreme south Florida during the night without doing serious damage showed signs today of recurving toward the Florida West Coast and of increasing to hurricane intensity.

Storm warnings were up from Fort Pierce on the Atlantic side around the tip of the peninsula to a point just south of Carrabelle on the northwest Gulf Coast.

Steel Workers Sign Peace Pact

Sterling, Ill., July 29 (AP)—Representatives of the Northwestern Barb Wire Company and the committee for industrial organization announced completion of an agreement today to end the first strike in the nation wide drive to unionize the steel industry.

Don't Poison Baby

Through Your Constipation

Nursing mothers must avoid constipation. Slow bowel movements allow poisons to form and be absorbed by the blood. This means tainted milk for baby.

Mothers are the best friends of Nujol. When precious new lives are at stake they use and give their babies Nujol—the remedy medical authorities prescribe because it is so safe, so gentle, and so natural in its action.

Constipation is dangerous for anybody. Nujol is safe for everybody. It does not affect the stomach and is not absorbed by the body.

Nujol makes up for a deficiency of natural lubricant in the intestines. It softens the waste matter and thus permits thorough and regular bowel movements without griping.

Just try Nujol regularly for the next month and see if you don't feel better than you ever suspected you could.

Ask your druggist for Nujol and insist on the genuine.

25 Thousand Million Dollars in the Red

Administration's Record Draws Fire of Landon

Pledges of Sound Money and Balanced Budget Broken—Kansan Warns of Crushing Debt Burden

In his acceptance speech at Topeka, Governor Landon's earnest, forthright attack on wild government spending struck an answering chord in the hearts of all intelligent Americans.

Every wage-earner and salaried worker knows that if he makes thirty dollars a week and spends sixty he goes bankrupt.

So, too, with the nation. For every dollar that Uncle Sam has been "making"—in taxes—he has been spending TWO since Mr. Roosevelt took office.

Without rancor, but with unmistakable sincerity, Governor Landon said:

"We recognize that society, acting through government, must afford as large a measure of protection as it can against involuntary unemployment and dependency in old age. WE PLEDGE THAT THE FEDERAL GOVERNMENT WILL DO ITS PROPER SHARE IN THAT TASK.

"But it must be kept in mind that . . . mounting debts and increasing taxes constitute a threat to all of these aims.

"They absorb the funds that might be used to create new things or to reduce the cost of present goods.

"Taxes, both visible and invisible, add to the price of everything.

"By taking more and more out of the family purse, they leave less for the family security.

"Let us not be misled by those who tell us that others will be made to carry the burden for us.

"A simple inquiry into the facts and figures will show that our growing debts and taxes are so enormous that, even if we tax to the utmost limits those who are best able to pay, THE AVERAGE TAXPAYER WILL STILL HAVE TO BEAR THE MAJOR PART.

"While spending billions of borrowed money may create a temporary appearance of prosperity, we and our children, as taxpayers, have yet to pay the bill.

"FOR EVERY SINGLE DOLLAR SPENT WE WILL PAY BACK TWO DOLLARS!"

Contrast the downright honesty and common sense of Governor Landon's utterance with Mr. Roosevelt's promise and performance, as shown in the pictures on this page.

The "sound currency" which Candidate Roosevelt promised in plain English to preserve at all hazards—what has become of that?

Well, by executive fiat, President Roosevelt has clipped 40.94 cents from every dollar in the United States, reducing its REAL value to 59.06 cents.

A 100-cent dollar from which 40 cents has been extracted is no longer a sound dollar. It is no longer a dollar. It is 60 cents. That is plain arithmetic, as well as plain English. And it is precisely what the Roosevelt Administration has done to the currency, IN COMPLETE DEFIANCE of its specific pledges to the people.

As for the deficits—those deficits which Candidate Roosevelt so often declared MUST be ended—what of them?

The two lower pictures in this page tell that story in damaging—we had almost said damning—detail.

Though CANDIDATE Roosevelt promised a balanced budget, PRESIDENT Roosevelt closed the books for 1933 with a red ink item of more than FIVE THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND SEVENTY-FOUR MILLION DOLLARS.

He closed them in 1934 with a red ink item of more than FIVE THOUSAND THREE HUNDRED AND SIX MILLION DOLLARS

He closed them in 1935 with a red ink item of more than SEVEN THOUSAND TWO HUNDRED AND FORTY-THREE MILLION DOLLARS.

And he will close them this year, according to his own Secretary Morgenthau, with a red ink item of SEVEN THOUSAND SIX HUNDRED AND FORTY-FIVE MILLION DOLLARS.

"A budget annually balanced; estimates WITHIN revenue."

That was the promise.

"A total deficit, in four years, of more than TWENTY-FIVE THOUSAND MILLION DOLLARS.

That is the performance.

Governor Landon, like every humane American, believes in ample expenditures for relief.

Like every humane American, he would not permit a single one of his fellow Americans to go unsheltered or hungry during a world-wide economic cataclysm.

But Governor Landon demands, as all Americans have the right to demand, that relief shall not be made the excuse for the waste of billions.

That demand is the demand of the American people, for the simple reason that IT MAKES SENSE, NOT NONSENSE.

Pictorial Record of Roosevelt's Empty Promises and Futile Performances

"PLAIN ENGLISH"

"The Democratic platform specifically declares 'We advocate a sound currency to be preserved at all hazards.' That is plain English."

Orangeburg Reunion:

Jack Sharkey Does

A Rip Van Winkle

Austen Lake

SOON AFTER DAWN SATURDAY WHILE the mists of early morning are lifting from Chestnut Hill's reservoir, Jack Sharkey will kiss his kids farewell and shove off from the family manse for Orangeburg, N. Y.—the training scene that he knew in his fistic heyday, before he succumbed in a dreamless sleep to a right hand uppercut from "Primo" Carnera.

There in the drowsy, elm shaded hamlet which, legend says, old Rip Van Winkle tottered down from the Catskills after 20 years of unbroken slumber among the rocky crags, our ancient, but still spry, mariner will put in his last training licks for Joe Louis.

Rip's old legend, which Sharkey is reliving in modern version, tells how Van Winkle stumbled down from the mountains, leaning on his mouldy gun stock, fumbling with his scraggly beard and being followed by curious children

And when he came to the town tavern where in his youth he had spend the sunny hours, he found a strange owner and alien faces so that, bewildered, he had implored: "Doesn't anybody remember Rip Van Winkle?"

The Orangeburg tavern and fight camp, which used to belong to Gus Wilson when Sharkey trained there in his physical noon tide, has passed into other hands. But the scene is the same, with the big indoor arena and the open-air platform where Jack used to sock his spar mates silly, do his stomach rolls and shadow shuffles. Like Rip Van Winkle, it is Jack who has changed during his interval of oblivion.

Instead of [illegible] Jack has grown mirthful, affable and self-contained, no longer throwing tearful tantrums, cussing the camp cook and indulging in [illegible]. And instead of the lithe tar, with a lean ripple of [illegible] across his brisket, and flats and angles along his torso, there are [illegible] and the suggestion of middle aged bulges. So that Jack, like Rip, [illegible] reason to enquire of the ringside assemblage, "Isn't there [illegible] who knows Jack Sharkey?"

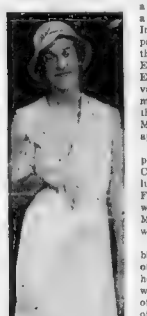
Cohasset Holds Social Spotlight With Luncheon and Tennis

By BETTY ALDEN

MARBLEHEAD will be the center of interest in the social and sporting world next week, so yesterday Cohasset had its innings before most of the South Shorites load their knapsacks into their yachts and head northward for Marblehead harbor . . .

From morning to midnight the Cohasset social calendar was unusually crowded . . . By the time we caught up with them a great many socialites were enjoying a leisurely luncheon at the Black Horse Inn, where their dessert was accompanied by a little mental stimulus in the form of a brief lecture on Italy and Ethiopia by Anne Pepper Varney . . . Even while relaxing on their summer vacations energetic Bostonians seldom miss an opportunity to brush up on their knowledge of world affairs, so Mrs. Varney had an interested and appreciative audience . . .



JANE BANCROFT

Mrs. Hugh Bancroft was accompanied by her daughters, Mrs. William C. Cox and Jane Bancroft, and also lunching with them were Mrs. Conover Fitch in a summery white silk dress with a yellow straw picture hat, and Mrs. W. Ladd, who was also dressed in white . . .

Chatting amiably over the bright blue glass and colorful linens at another table in this quaint old-fashioned house were Mrs. Francis Hastings with her guests, Mrs. Irving C. Wright of Chestnut Hill and Mrs. Oliver Hall of Hingham . . .

General M. W. Ireland of Washington, D. C., former surgeon-general of the U. S. Army, and Mrs. Ireland, lent a bit of official dignity to the occasion and were the guests of Mrs. William H. Spicer of Hingham . . .

Mrs. F. R. Hall of Hingham entertained her mother, Mrs. Faeth of Kansas City, and another pair of intent and interested listeners were Mrs. James W. Rollins of Crow Point and Mrs. Frank Langdon Smith . . . Mrs. Prescott Cumner wore an attractive navy linen outfit and Mrs. Malcolm Bradley French was in pale blue from head to toe, with a little pink for contrast . . . Because of her interest in public affairs and women's clubs, Mrs. Roger Conant Hatch of Cohasset was chosen to introduce Mrs. Varney, and she wore a most fetching outfit of pale blue with embroidery in pastel colors and a wide brimmed purple straw hat . . . Mrs. Delano Wight, Miss Muriel Crocker and Mrs. Charles F. Cutler were also present . . .

Tennis Stars Return to Courts

MRS. COX HUSTLED over to the Cohasset Country Club right after luncheon to keep a watchful eye on the results of the tennis tournament and learn who her next opponents in the doubles were to be . . . In her pretty white lace two-piece frock with gold kid belt and white slippers, she was ready for anything from luncheon to the semi-formal buffet supper and entertainment at the clubhouse in the evening . . . and thought nothing of sitting right down on the grass in it to watch the tennis . . .

Champions and famous figures of the sports world are notable for their endurance and ability to stay in the game for a number of years . . . Many have made a meteoric burst and cut a swathe for a year or two, but the Babe Ruths and Bill Tildens continue to turn in sterling performances year after year . . . If feminine candidates could be admitted to the hall of fame with the other sports greats, we would nominate Eleo Sears, Mrs. J. Lewis Bremer and Mrs. George Wightman . . .

Their active interest in tennis which began when they were girls in their teens, has continued well past the time when most women give their racquet to a little daughter or son, and limit their activities to a seat in the background . . .

"Eleo" is playing at Essex this week, and Mrs. Bremer is playing some fast sets in the Cohasset tournament . . . Marjorie Morrill Painter gave the gallery at Cohasset some excellent tennis to watch, and Vadge Ellis of Chestnut Hill, one of the top seeded players, managed to avoid any conflict in her social engagements and appointments on the courts by calling off her date last evening and staying over night with the Bremers . . .

Town Hall Show Concludes Busy Day

MRS. ALBERT TITCOMB sat on the sidelines with Mrs. Albert Matless while their daughters, Betty Titcomb and Connie Matless, upheld the family honor on the courts . . . Connie and Betty, who stuck together all through their deb season last winter, are paired in the doubles and both wore natty shorts outfits for their tournamenting . . .

There were any number of tennis fans sitting around on the grass or on the clubhouse porch including Frannie McElwain, Denise Hyde, Peggy Blake, Mrs. Philip Theopold, and several Chapin girls . . .

Martha Chapin and Betty Titcomb cast off their boyish sports outfits and donned fluffy evening finery in time to appear at the opening of "Fly Away Home" at the Town Hall in the evening . . .

William Blees, one of the young apprentices of the South Shore Players, is the hero of the town today, after learning a lengthy part in 24 hours to fill in a vacancy in the cast left by a player who was stricken with appendicitis Monday evening . . . He played the part of the impetuous young son remarkably well . . .

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pitman were among the who's who present, as were Mrs. Horace Drinkwater and Mrs. William Ball Rice, Mr. and Mrs. Francis Hastings, Mr. and Mrs. Prescott Cumner, Ada Dewson and the Royden Lorings . . .

HER PET Show Entry Carries Off Top Honors

BESIDES BEING PROMINENT in social circles here, Mrs. Robert Winthrop of Westbury, L. I., is well known to dog fanciers, for she always enters her thoroughbreds in the Boston show and some of the smaller local affairs. During her visit here last week with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Fanning Ayer of Hamilton, she exhibited her grey poodle in an outdoor show and captured the award for best in show. Mrs. Winthrop is the former Theodora Ayer, and sister of Mrs. Gilbert Steward of Topsfield. The package under her arm contains the prize awarded to her.

JUNIOR BIRDMEN OF AMERICA

DEVOTED TO THE INTEREST OF THE YOUTH OF THE AMERICAS IN AVIATION

—TOMORROW'S MODEL PILOTS TODAY'S PILOTS OF MODELS

Hey, Junior Birdmen! The cruise is over, but the memories linger on! Because in the individualistic language of Jack Golden, one of Brookline's contributions to Junior Birdmen's best model builders, the cruise was a wow and how!

Dressed in their best bibs and tuckers and some without bibs, several hundred members of the Boston American wing boarded the steamer Steel Pier yesterday morning and flew it high, wide and handsome without a sloppy turn to Provincetown and back in their second annual all-day cruise.

The attendance was five or six times greater than that of last year and the cruise was five or six times better than last years trip to Cape Cod Canal, because—well, first it didn't rain and Junior Birdmen have learned to expect a drenching at nearly every outing. And second, the trip was longer and the sights, including a two-hour stop in Provincetown, were more interesting.

FETED AT LUNCHEON

Also Junior Birdman folks were along, 1200 in all, making the cruise at a cost of only $1 each by using the coupon in the Boston American. Dads, mothers, sisters and uncles were present, having as good a time as the Junior Birdmen even if they didn't tread the decks quite so often.

The feature was a special chicken luncheon for Frank A. Barrett, Jr Brighton winner of the recent wing outdoor New England championship in model flying, and the new aces, "Art" Sampson, Constantins Pappas and Gordon Cain. L. A. Mitchell, chief steward and executive officer, praised the prowess of those youths as he presented Frank with his trophy and the others with medals and Ace bars amid a lot of applause. The group was also greeted by Captain Kent, the Steel Pier's commander.

And a few observations—Sid Wadeland saw more than most members. He carried a huge pair of binoculars . . . And "Hoy" Green didn't get sick this year. Of course reports filtered through that he was hiding at the end of the sail, but no evidence was presented that he had succumbed.

"Bud" Morrell played bridge and spent the rest of his time announcing that he was looking for a job. He's a bright, clean-cut youth and he'll probably get one soon. Miss Esther E. Larson was aboard and as were nearly a dozen Flying Hawks, that tornolen squadron who sponsors at John Winthrop ar . . . Johnny Closs of Watson Pl . . . appearing in his best suit and sailor's cap that he was mistaken for a ship's officer time and again.

"Eddie" Munzing was there and so were Melvin Lebowitz, Anselmo Dorrwachter, Charles Freeman, Melvin Wittenberg, Norman Wiedeman, "Cliff" Holmes, Kenneth Budgell and dozens of others

Leonard Wittenberg and Raymond Symkus announced that the Cloud Busters would award a prize, a 16 square to the five member who got sick. No one knows who won the prize. Bill Mezo won the broad jump in the impromptu track meet held on "A" deck. He's going to be a Jess Owens some day. "Bill" Shea, general manager of the model shop he and his brother own was on the cruise as President "Bob" Shea was left to mind the store.

GALA TIME

How some of those lads could dive at Provincetown for coins thrown into the water? "Art" Sampson was among those who went bicycling. So was Maurice Sulkin. Eight Junior Birdmen were spotted in a store looking closely at—you've guessed it—model planes kits. Even a cruise aboard the Steel Pier couldn't keep their minds off aviation.

And yet there wasn't a Junior Birdman or Birdwoman who didn't regret that the sail was over when the ship finally returned to her wharf. Because as it was enjoyed above the cruise was a wow and how

New York, July 29 (INS)—Park Avenue listened with interest today to reports that the 13-months-old "trial separation" of Allan A. Ryan Jr. and his pretty young wife, the former Janet Newbold, had ended in failure.

The grandson of the late Thomas Fortune Ryan is understood to have obtained a divorce decree somewhere in the west under the most amicable terms. The Ryans announced a friendly separation in 1935.

House of Death

The Story of Three Children That Matched Wits With Madman

By FLOYD GIBBONS

FLOYD GIBBONS

HELLO EVERYBODY:

Here's a terrifying tale if ever there was one—sent to me by Mrs. Robert Scott of Forest Hills, N. Y. But let's call her Chubby, for that was her nickname when, as a little girl of 12, this adventure happened.

That was back in 1905 on the 29th of October. Chubby was living on a farm near Pompton Lakes, N. J., with her mother, dad, and two brothers, Drew and Garry. Drew was 16 at the time and Garry was 14. It was a Saturday, and mother and dad had left in the buggy about 10 a. m. to drive to the nearest shopping center. The three children were left home alone. The boys were pretty big and well able to take care of themselves and their little sister—most of the time. But the terrible thing that happened on that October day found them not even able to take care of themselves.

The three kids spent the day uneventfully, doing their chores and playing about the yard. At 6 o'clock, when mother and dad still hadn't returned, Chubby cooked a meal and they all ate. Then they sat in the parlor while Chubby read aloud from a volume of Grimm's Fairy Tales.

It was as peaceful a scene as you could imagine. Those three kids little dreamed that, even as they sat there, a half-crazed old man lurked outside, peering through the window at them.

About seven o'clock they heard footsteps on the porch and a loud knock. Then, suddenly, the door burst open and a wild-eyed man came stamping into the room.

"He made a hissing sound through his teeth," says Mrs. Scott, "and panted like a horse. With a quick movement he picked up a big wooden bar we used to bolt the door, swung it high over his head and cried, 'Those I hate I crush.'"

The three kids were terrified. They ran into the dining room and crouched at three of them—under the massive table. But the [illegible] pursued on. The man followed them, reached in and dragged Chubby out. He wrapped his fingers around Garry's neck, crushing him to insensibility, and then, picking up his unconscious form in his great arms, carried him outdoors and threw him down the well.

Screaming with terror—hardly knowing what they were doing, Drew and Chubby followed him out into the yard. There, the man grabbed Drew. And while Drew screamed, "Run, Chubby, or you'll be alone with him," the man ripped off Drew's suspenders and twisted them around his neck. And little Chubby, too dazed to run, watched in dumb agony while he choked Drew and dragged him off toward the barn. As he vanished through the barn door, though, she came to her senses, and ran back into the house.

Little Chubby knew a place in the house where she could hide. There was a trap door in the kitchen, and it led to a dark little cellar beneath the floor. She went through that door, bolted it behind her, and crept softly down the stairs.

Then she reached up to swing herself atop a big beam over the coal bin, but she had forgotten about the great-claw-like rat trap her dad had put there. Her reaching hand plunged into the trap. The claws dug deep into her arm.

Moaning with pain, she fell to the floor. The trap, chained to the beam, tore her flesh, but she didn't dare cry out. She lay on the ground like a prisoner chained in a dungeon.

Overhead she could hear the man searching the house for her. She could hear him walking in the parlor. He dropped upstairs, then [illegible]. Was he setting the house afire? Would she be burned to death in her cellar, trapped?

Meanwhile, Drew had fared little better. The man, half drag[illegible] him into the barn, choked him half to death, and then wrapping the suspender around his neck, hung him bodily on a harness peg. But Drew was still conscious and he kept his head.

Taking a jack-knife from his pocket he cut the suspenders and freed himself down. Reeling and breathless he staggered out into the yard and hobbled down the well. Had Chubby been thrown down there too? No! But Garry called up to him. Garry was still [illegible].

The cold water had revived him and he was [illegible] to a tree and to keep from drowning. "I can't stand it much longer," he moaned. "Hold on, sis! Drew, I'm going for help!"

It was a terrifying scene that mother and dad returned to, half an hour later. The house and yard were full of people. Garry had been pulled from the well, nearly frozen and coming down with pneumonia. Drew sat in a chair, dazed. Chubby was nowhere in sight. Her mother ran through the house crying for her.

Chubby heard her. She cried out and kicked one foot against the side of the coal bin. Then she heard the bolted trap-door splinter as her dad attacked it with an axe. She was a pitiful sight when they carried her out of that cellar and took the trap from her arm. The arm was swollen to twice its natural size—torn—scratched—lacerated.

Immediately after Drew had summoned help, a posse of men began to comb the hills in search of the old man. They caught him a day or so later, and sent him back to an institution from which he had escaped after murdering a guard.

[illegible] Adventure [illegible] Drew [illegible] arrested [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Stewart Given Lead In Anti-War Film

By LOUELLA O. PARSONS
Motion Picture Editor, Universal Service
Copyright, 1936, by Universal Service

Los Angeles, July 29 (US)—Long, lanky Jimmy Stewart definitely is going places with that fascinating drawl of his. Jimmy's first real break came in "Next Time We Love," and he registered sufficiently to be recalled pronto to the old home Metro lot where he is under contract. Since then he has been big enough in small parts to win the praise of both critics and customers.

Metro, sure that the boy is of star caliber, is seeking special material for him, and he'll get a genuine opportunity in the lead of "They Gave Him a Gun," a dramatic indictment of war and its disastrous effect upon youth. Jimmie will be a battlefield hero who turns racketeer. Major William J. Cowen, author of the novel, is the husband of Lenore Coffee, well-known scenarist.

"In Darkest Africa With Gun and Camera," sounds like a Frank Buck or Richard Halliburton yarn. But this time the bold adventurer will be Barton MacLane. Jack Warner, who is propelling "Black Bart" toward stardom, plans to send a sound and camera crew into the African interior under the leadership of Paul L. Hoefler, who produced "Africa Speaks." With MacLane as star, Mr. Hoefler will direct a picture from his own story of adventure title "The Dark Empire." The Hollywood safari will get under way within a few months.

Mary Carlisle is walking on air these days because so many good things are happening in her pleasant young life. One of the most important is the contract just signed which makes her a Paramount star for seven years. Mary stepped out of an MGM contract into the Zukor outfit all within a few short hours. But she doesn't start work until November first which gives her a chance to go abroad and enjoy a European holiday with Marion Davies.

Chatter in Hollywood: Hollywood's "founding fathers," and the motion picture industry itself, are getting along in years. There's a second generation of stars and executives. Many of these will gather at the annual movie "fathers' and son's banquet," which has lined up the sons of Schulberg, Rapf, Briskin, Warner, Rogers, Landau, Lewis and a host more to collaborate in putting on a show that will open their dads' eyes.

The character of Mme. Prudence is vastly important in "Camille." That's why George Cukor made over a dozen tests before he found the right personality. He believes he has her in Laura Hope Crews, whose first test was so good that she was informed that this delectable role is hers. Another selection for the Garbo epic was made with the signing of Barry Norton who has been in Mexico making pictures for the past year and who returned just on the chance he might be elected.

Miss Marion Davies, soon to leave on an European holiday, was the guest of honor at a party given by Louella O. Parsons in her Beverly Hills home as scores of Hollywood stars wished her bon voyage. Surrounding the lovely star in the above photo are William Powell, Norma Shearer, Errol Flynn, Kay Francis and Jack Warner.

Film Packs Plenty of Mystery

"Meet Nero Wolfe," picture based on "Fer de Lance," by Rex Stout, will be seen on the screen of the Keith Memorial Theater, starting tomorrow.

Edward Arnold is the star of this film which concerns the detective method of a lazy, beer imbibing amateur sleuth who hasn't left his house in seven years, but depends on his super-stooge, played by Lionel Etander here, to gather facts and suspects which he uses to solve crimes.

"Meet Nero Wolfe" has to do with two murders, both believed at first to be natural deaths. Wolfe rounds up six suspects and is convinced he is on the right trail when a third man dies in the midst of his investigations.

A golf club, transformed into gun which shot a poisoned needle is the lethal weapon used in the first murder and a similar needle shot through a blow-gun accomplishes the second. The bite of the deadly de lance, a snake common to the South American tropics, in whose poison the two needles were dipped, was used in the third crime.

Joe E. Brown in Super Role

"Earthworm Tractors," Joe E. Brown's latest comedy, will have its New England premiere tomorrow at the Paramount and Fenway theaters. "Educating Father," the second episode in the Jones family, will be the accompanying picture on these twin screens.

June Travis, Guy Kibbee and Carol Hughes support Joe E. Brown in "Earthworm Tractors," which has been made from the famous William Haslett Upson series of stories which appeared in a national magazine.

Brown is seen as Alexander Botts, the self-styled super-salesman of Earthworm Tractors. As this character, he is reported to have the best role of his career and promises a more comical portrayal than his popular "Alibi Ike" part.

"Educating Father" is a sequel to "Every Saturday Night" and deals with the adventures and experiences of an average American family.

Shirley Deane, Dixie Dunbar, Jed Prouty, Spring Byington, Kenneth Howell, June Carlson and George Ernest are the players in this picture.

Governor Landon Holds Oath Inviolable

GOVERNOR ALFRED M. LANDON, in accepting the Republican Presidential nomination, pledged that his oath of office will be held INVIOLABLE as long as he is President of the United States.

Mr. Landon said:

"No man, in common good faith to his fellow citizens, may rightfully assume the duties of the high office of Chief Executive and take the oath that goes with the office, unless he shall INTEND to keep and SHALL keep his oath inviolate. It is with full understanding of the meaning of this oath that I accept this nomination."

This is Mr. Landon's assurance to the voters of the United States that in his conception an oath of public office cannot be utilized as an INSTRUMENT OF CONVENIENCE.

IF HE is elected as President, there will be no messages to Congress directing it to enact legislation "despite doubts, however reasonable," of its conformance to constitutional law.

As President, Mr. Landon will stand BETWEEN the Constitution and any man or group of men seeking to evade the fundamental law of America.

He will do this because he will have TAKEN HIS OATH to support and defend the Constitution of the United States.

He will do it, because he believes any man who would do less would be unworthy of the high office entrusted to him.

In ordinary circumstances, it would seem superfluous for a Presidential candidate to pledge himself TO THE KEEPING of his oath. The oath itself is a pledge of honor. Honor once pledged is worthless if there is need of repeating the pledge.

But a dangerous precedent has been established in the Presidency, in the form of an INTERPRETATION of the oath of office as a flexible bond.

GOVERNOR LANDON is bound by conscience to tell the nation HE CANNOT ACCEPT THAT INTERPRETATION.

To him, his WORD OF HONOR is a bond from which there is no release. He regards fidelity to honor as a sacred trust an honest man cannot compromise and remain faithful to his country or to himself.

When Alfred M. Landon takes the Presidential oath to "preserve, protect and defend the Constitution of the United States," his own CREED OF HONOR will forever close the door to "interpretation" of his obligation under that pledge.

Economic Note—Very Sad

IN WHAT American city do you think the cost of living is the highest? Boston? Not at all. It's Washington.

Washington, naturally, is the first city to feel the effect of crystal gazing translated into action. Its residents are the first to pay.

The survey which determined that the choice a citizen gets to the heart of his present government the more it costs him to live was made by Federal agencies.

That makes it official—if that's any comfort to Washingtonians.

Yankee Brains Challenged!

A Perfect Fit

Yankee ingenuity first took the world from the hand stage to machine production.

In the development of the Machine Age, New England and the United States won and held a leadership for decades in production of machine-made goods.

Now, according to the American Chemical Society, Germany has learned to produce, with wholly German raw products, more than 100 major articles of trade formerly bought from us and other countries.

Italy, under the sting of League of Nations sanctions, has found a way to manufacture gasoline from coal and alcohol.

This should interest America. What Germany and Italy are doing, OTHER countries are also doing. And the more self-sufficient THEY become, the greater will be OUR loss in the world markets.

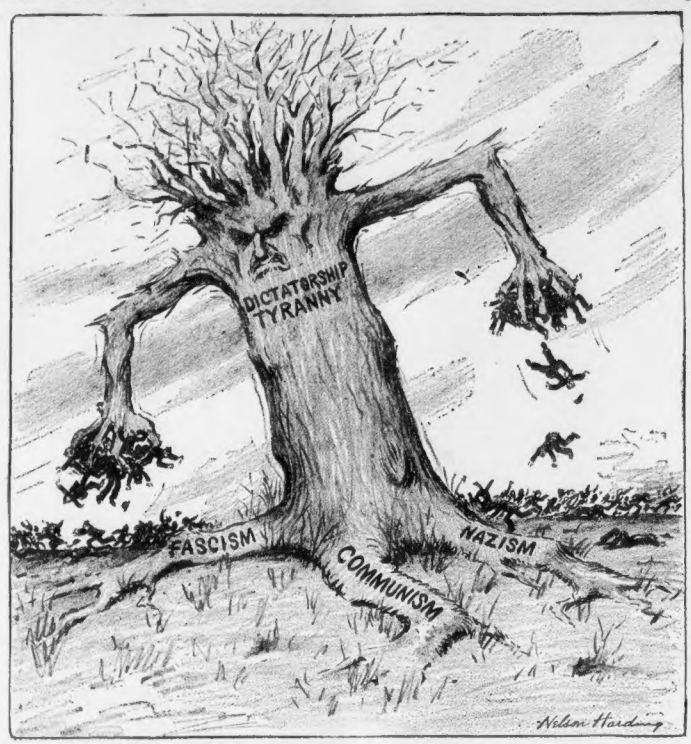
Let America look ahead.

UTILIZE AMERICAN RAW MATERIALS.

CREATE AMERICAN SUBSTITUTES FOR FOREIGN GOODS NOW IMPORTED. THEN BUY AMERICAN.

The Roots of Evil -:- -:- -:-

By Nelson Harding



From those roots a growth has risen
Filling the pure air with poison
And with live and ruthless branches
Spreading cruel terrorism.

We must guard against this menace
Taking root within our borders
And before the tree gets started
Tear out every root of evil.

New York Day by Day

By O. O. McIntyre

O. O. McIntyre

New York, July 29—The town is having a Dutch Treat vogue. The idea: Invite an agreeable crowd to lunch and dinner and each pay his own check. The stunt is not confined to those of moderate means, but to socialites who patronize such spots as the Colony.

For a long time luncheon and dinner parties in the better restaurants have been in a slump. Even the wealthy with taxes and shrunken incomes could not stand the rising prices of the cafes. Some one started the Dutch Treat idea at Les Ambassadeurs, the fancy Champs Elysees place in Paris.

A returning traveler showed up with the idea in New York and tried it out on a group of her intimates at a luncheon. It was something odd with the punch of the new. People who had been forced to eschew accepting such invitations because they could not return them jumped at the new order.

It is not unusual for Gwendolyn Astorbilt to call up a former boarding school chum with: "How about lunch today at the St. Regis—Dutch?" The frankness is something appealing these skimpy days. Cafe men have popped out of their dolor and the flashes of the sun again, too.

Irving Berlin is said to be the most nervous of the expectant fathers. The recent birth of his third daughter found him a pathetic, woe-begone fellow pacing the corridors, walking the sidewalk out front, smoking cigarettes chain fashion and watching for any signal that might bring news of a safe arrival.

Few love affairs have shown such constancy as that between the sad-eyed song writer and the former Ellin Mackay. It was doomed by the gossips to go on the rocks. But it didn't by a long shot.

Among the delightful residential cul de sacs is Sniffen Court, tucked in a shabbily reach of Third avenue in the 30's. There are seven quaint old houses in the court swerving in a sudden turn that suggests those delightful hide-aways in Paris. Pearl Buck once lived in Sniffen Court. So did Loren Pickering and Berton Braley. Melvina Hoffman has her studio there as has Harriet Frishmuth, the sculptress.

And standing like gaunt death's heads on the north and south corners of a block forming the eastern side of 5th avenue are two vacant and disenchanted brownstones, slowly, steadily going into the decay that suggests the haunted house of a Poe mystery story.

They are a part of the Wendel estate and are reaching the flapping shuttered forlornness of the old Wendel mansion, not far away, where the eccentric sisters lived in such shabbiness so long.

And those high-boarded mile lion-dollar side yard was a playground for their toothless and asthmatic dog Toby. I used to peek through a knot hole at Toby.

Critics seem to agree the skits of Alexander Fogarty in the recent youthful hoop-de-do "New Faces of 1936" reached a high in sophisticated spoofing.

Especially one called "Lottie of the Literati," which paid respects in music and verse to Sinclair Lewis, Fannie Hurst, Alexander Woollcott, Cecil Beaton and Ernest Hemingway.

Another hilarious take-off is that of Mrs. Franklin Roosevelt, an astonishing impersonation, not only to details of her appearance, but her voice and pronunciation.

We pride ourselves on our memories.

We envy Bill, who can rattle off miles of statistics without one skid, tell you what his golf score and Babe Ruth's batting average were way back in '32.

And we think Estelle's "m a rvelous" because she can report what every woman in a bridge party of 50 wore, etc., said or did, including the most intimate details of all their operations, divorces, servant brawls and in-law battles.

Aren't such people "perfect wonders?"

No, they're not. They're walking waste baskets and should be ashamed to use the human brain for such trash.

STILL LIKE POW-WOW

Remembering everything is neither useful nor intelligent. To the contrary, it shows a disgusting lack of discrimination and self-control and, culturally, is exactly on a par with eating everything that's put before you, or buying everything you see.

Ours is a crowded and chaotic society, in many respects still as immature and almost as any savage pow-wow. Nine-tenths of the things we see and hear are petty and pointless, if not downright vicious and vulgar. It is not only stupid to remember this vast and messy mass of trivialities—it is Bad Business, demoralizing to both mind and character.

The human mind—like other delicate and complicated machines—can receive and retain only a certain amount of material and assimilate it at only a certain rate. Amount and rate to be determined by the capacity of the individual in question.

DISCARD TRASH

Stupid, chudish people stuff their minds regardless, like youngsters gobbling candy. But nothing comes of the stuffing. The raw material is not assimilated and it does not add to the shrewdness, strength, charm or forcefulness of the stuffer. Bill remembers golf scores . . . Estelle recalls operations. But what of it? And who cares?

Intelligent, mature minds see and hear as much as the stupid stuffers see and hear—are surrounded by the same chaos, over which they have little control. But they can control their own intake—and do.

They can, and do, refuse to waste their time with idlers—listen to the babblings and belchings of fat-heads and fussers. And, if they find themselves in such company, they can and do refuse to absorb the flood of trash which swirls about them.

They refuse to remember. They have learned how to forget.

They have learned to forget slights and snubs, insults—even deliberate wrongs.

For how can it profit anyone to brood over such things?

You have just so much storage room . . . just so much energy. If you fill your mind with rubbish, you will have no space for the worth while recollections. If you use your energy to resent or grieve over the ills of yesterday, you will lack the energy to develop the good of today and tomorrow.

"THEY SHALL NOT PASS!"

That was a great war slogan. It's as great a maxim in daily life. No alien foe is more hostile to you than the idlers you meet around your own table, across your office desk or factory bench. No enemy bullet or bomb is, in the long run, more dangerous than petty prattle or peevish gossip.

REFUSE TO ACCEPT OR REMEMBER TRASH. LEARN TO FORGET NON-ESSENTIALS.

Listen, World!

The Marry-Go-Round

By Helen Rowland

Many a wife spends her whole life trying to understand a man's idiosyncrasies—and ends by being thankful if she can just MEMORIZE them.

She can read all the popular books on "behaviorism" and still be completely at sea about the "human paradox" whose grapefruit she fixes every morning and whose tonic she ladles out twice a day.

For instance, a man will talk for hours about his digestion, or the diseases of his liver, give you an itemized account of his diet list, and gloomily describe just how it felt when he had ptomaine poisoning; but he will be embarrassed to blushes when you mention his SOUL.

He will contribute to three orphan asylums, send Christmas gifts to 200 employes, keep flowers on his mother-in-law's grave the year around—and then go about turning out the lights to save expense, complaining the laundry bills are ruining him and wondering why you can't wear lisle-top stockings.

He will buy nothing but antiques with a history, medieval tapestry and books with rare bindings—yet his very dearest possession may be a yellow bound of mixed and uncertain lineage and his taste in women may run to chorus ladies and hat-check girls

He may vow that he likes his whisky straight and his women curved, and then spoil his wife's whole evening by going gaga over an animated bona whose earrings play tunes on her collar blades but whose green eyes have the Deitrich lure.

Yet, if an old college mate asks him what sort of a woman he married, all he can do in the way of describing the "paragon" is to say that the way she cooks a waffle or broils a steak is NOBODY'S business.

In short, a man is the soul of inconsistency and the world's greatest paradox. And no woman who takes up the study of one man in a serious way need ever join a query club for diversion. She can get all her surprises right at home!

Our Thankless Children

Human Side of the News

By Edwin C. Hill

THE GLOBE TROTTER OF HEARST METROTONE NEWS

Edwin C. Hill

"Manifest destiny" doesn't necessarily stay manifest after a workout or a few decades. Thirty-eight years ago, when we took over Puerto Rico and the Philippines in our first colonial outreach, it was all predetermined and indubitable, as America took her place as a world power.

Now we're trying to back out. How to do it without recreance to our obligations to these troubled insular peoples is a problem more and more troublesome.

"We bring you the blessings of civilization," said General Nelson A. Miles, the old Indian fighter, to the Puerto Ricans. In their present mood, the islanders would trade the above for a couple of game cocks and a dish of yams. We jerked them out of feudalism and set them in the stream of the modern complex world economy.

They assess against us the ruin which is part of a world sequence. They are angry and confused. They like their motor cars, but they yearn for their bullcarts, their fiestas and their cockfights.

Here's a miniature world, either in transition into a new era or in retrogression into an old one. Whatever it is and whatever happens, they blame Uncle Sam.

All these ranging antecedents of civilizations and destinies focus for the moment in a dingy courtroom in San Juan, where the rabid and inflammatory Albizu Campos is being tried for treason. Oddly enough, the Tydings Bill provides just what Senor Campos is aiming at, the liberation of the islands.

But the Tydings plebiscite is one thing and the Campos revolution is something else, and it is all involved in errant and paradoxical issues which call for a quality of statesmanship, insular and federal, which has not yet appeared.

THE CAMPOS TRIAL

The Puerto Ricans won't stay on board, but they can't swim. We try to cobble up a lifeboat in the form of certain tariff concessions, but they say this won't do. So it all adds up to a grand muddle as one of the first endproducts of "manifest destiny."

One of the first and most obvious "blessings of civilization" which General Miles acclaimed for the island is, of course, education. So, fitting, a clever, fiery, zealous Puerto Rican lad went to Harvard and made a brilliant record. Lean, whippy, eloquent and personable, he became a leader of his people.

But, in the contagion of the modern world, his intellectual zeal and his scholastic equipment were sluiced into an inflamed nationalism, and so, like Lear, Uncle Sam finds sharper than a serpent's tooth the hatred of a thankless child—the Albizu Campos who, 25 years ago, appealed to Puerto Ricans, with tears in his eyes, to accept the boon of American democracy. He is implacable as he is arraigned for treason.

POOR AND HAPPY

Puerto Rico is about the size of Connecticut, with a population of 1,700,000. For 400 years the Spanish looted, gouged, rooked and scuttled it. But, so far as the masses of the people are concerned, it was more prosperous 40 years ago than it is today. It was distinctly feudal in its governmental and social organization.

In this beautiful mountainous, isolated country between the Atlantic and the Caribbean, bullcarts served for transportation; they enjoyed their cockfights, their aguardiente, their singing and their fiestas; yams, plantains, rice and bananas were adequate for food.

The Spanish allowed them freedom in tariff laws, which afforded them trade opportunities commensurate with their output and their needs. The church maintained a subordinate, benign theocracy and they enjoyed a pastoral civilization, on good terms with Mother Earth.

A SIMPLE PEOPLE

The population was just about half what it is today. With the influx of the "Yanquis" came absentee ownership, merchandization of the cane lands, factories, regimentation, shoes, tractors and the end of the bullcarts. By a sudden wrench, a people, culturally of the 17th century, were slammed into the lock-step of the Machine Age.

There was a high rise in the standard of living; public schools everywhere and a sharp drop in illiteracy; efficient policing, roads, diversified diet, and sanitation.

Was the enforced transition too swift? Did we, in imposing our own brand of civilization, perhaps overlook details of their civilization which should have been nurtured and safeguarded? We achieved much in humane and enlightened colonial administration. What went wrong? Is the present impasse in the island attributable to the breakdown of world economy to which we had geared Puerto Rico?

Statesmen like Will Rogers or David Harum might have understood these simple people better than our current politicians. In my occasional travels in Latin countries, I have found a regard for the amenities, for chivalry and for tolerance even among the humblest folk. Perhaps our troubles, as administrators, are partly due to our lack of due regard for this.

One thing I observed. In these countries how you do a thing may be more important than what you are doing. Our aims have been high in Puerto Rico, and compared to European and Asiatic colonizers we have been angels of light. But perhaps we must learn more of the how and less of the why and what.

That's That -:- By Bruce Gustin

From Topeka comes the announcement that Governor Landon, Republican presidential nominee, is planning a "fighting campaign." He undoubtedly will make an aggressive campaign. But it is not going to be a "fighting" campaign as that term is usually understood. Name-calling and mud-slinging are not in Governor Landon's line. He will discuss issues frankly and forcefully, but he won't resort to abuse. There will be nothing offensive to anybody in his part of the campaign.

In his acceptance speech Governor Landon definitely made the Constitution one of the main issues of the campaign. "There has now appeared in high places," he said, "a new and dangerous impulse. This is the impulse to take away and lodge in the Chief Executive, without the people's consent, the powers which they have kept in their State governments or which they have reserved to themselves. The Republican party does not believe that the people wish to abandon the AMERICAN FORM OF GOVERNMENT. We propose to maintain the constitutional balance of power between the States and the Federal Government."

In raising the constitutional issue, Governor Landon has attacked the Roosevelt administration where it is most vulnerable. From the very beginning of his New Deal, President Roosevelt has constantly sought more and more power for himself and his bureaucratic creations.

Warnings from the United States Supreme Court that the Constitution does not permit the Federal Government to exercise powers it has attempted to usurp have been ignored. When an act of Congress was declared unconstitutional, Congress, under administration urging, proceeded to re-enact that measure in slightly altered form, but to accomplish the original purpose. The nation has even witnessed the spectacle of the President urging Congress to adopt a bill regardless of doubts, no matter how reasonable, as to its constitutionality.

The New Dealers are afraid of the constitutional issue. They haven't dared raise it. They lack the frankness and the courage to propose and sponsor a constitutional amendment concentrating in the Federal Government all the power they want the Federal Government to exercise. Clearly, they are convinced such an amendment would not be ratified.

Senator Borah, speaking Friday at Hagerman, Ida., reminded the American people that the Constitution is their safeguard against tyranny.

"In the bewildering mass of governmental schemes now seeping the countries of the world," he said, "there is one unalloyed purpose running through them all and that is to control, if not destroy, the liberty of the citizen. Whether it is the Fascist, the Communist or the bureaucratic state, the result is the same—waste, debts, taxes, and ultimately complete subjection of the people to the governing power."

It will be a sad day for the American people if they ever forget this.

When horse-and-buggy drivers attempt to drive modern, high-speed automobiles tragedy results. A few days ago a Fresno, Cal., family of ten was virtually wiped out in a collision between their automobile and an oil truck. While driving at a high rate of speed, the wife and mother turned around to reprimand some of her children who were in the back seat. The car swerved and hit the truck. The mother and three children were killed instantly. The father and four children were injured seriously.

Automobile drivers who do not learn, at the very outset, that they must keep their eyes and thoughts focused on the road ahead of them, especially when driving at high speed, do not last very long. Automobiles are marvelous devices. But they can neither see nor reason. They are safe or as deadly as the person at the steering wheel makes them or permits them to be.

The appeal of the Federal Government to the United States Supreme Court for protection against a flood of complicated and expensive suits until the constitutionality of the Public Utility Holding Company Act is determined is amusing. The idea seems to prevail in Washington that it is all right for the government to harrass individual citizens and business. But it is unfair and wrong for people to ask the courts to protect them against attempts of the government to destroy their property.
